A Little Lady Came.
Hope Versus Memory.
Good News, Two Sources.
Hear Tosuke Yamasaki.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

A PRESS AGENT of superior horse-power introduced into the Senatorial investigation room in Washington a tiny lady midget, in need of conspicuous advertising.

Senator Fletcher objected violently, and naturally, saying that no press agent should "make a circus" of solemn Senatorial proceedings.

Mr. Morgan took the little lady on his lap, smiled, and they were photographed.

Those old enough to remember Opper's pictures of "Willie and his poppa" should be able to write something about that.

AN OBSERVER of human nature, Mr. L. J. H., remarks, "Hope is stronger than memory."

Some now gambling gaily, whose memory is weaker than their hope, will wish, later, perhaps, that it was the other way around.

INFORMATION THAT indicates a depression "fade-out" comes from friends in Dayton and Detroit, by wire.

From Dayton, James W. Irwin wires that the Frigidaire Corporation, branch of General Motors, has orders for June that will exceed the total of any thirty-day period in the company's history. E. G. Biechler, president and general manager, gives out the figures.

Most important, TEN THOUSAND MEN, greatest number since 1929, are working full time in the company's two Dayton plants, and the new manufacturing is to fill orders, not to create stock.

H. G. MOOCK, of Walter Chrysler's organization, telegraphs from Detroit that Chrysler's Plymouth car has broken its records for production and employment, turning out thirty-nine thousand cars during the month of May.

This means that Walter Chrysler continues to be a person of considerable energy.

THE "JUNIOR CRUSADERS," a youthful law and order organization, invite you to a mass meeting at Carnegie Hall in New York this evening. Dr. Mather A. Abbott, head master of Lawrenceville School, and other distinguished speakers will talk about modern crime, racketeering and other evils fostered by bootlegging—a product of prohibition.

Since it has been made apparent that the full-grown men of the United States cannot or will not do anything about the crime wave, it is, doubtless, a good idea to arouse interest in the next generation, hoping that it may do something.

Dealing with the crime of today ought, however, be the work of men of today.

THE NEW YORK State Chamber of Commerce urges President Roosevelt to stay on the gold basis, saying:

"Recovery hinges on our stand against inflation."

Where has there been any inflation? Have YOU, gentle reader, found the dollar unusually accessible?

Has not the country been on the gold basis through four solid years of depression? What good did that do THIS country?

Are not the most ardent friends of an American gold basis those foreigners whose cheap money has helped them, while a dear United States dollar has hurt us?

Much nonsense is talked about gold.

FOR A change from dry news read an inside story of modern conditions in America, printed by Mr. Tosuke Yamasaki on the English language editorial page of "Kashu Mainichi," otherwise "The Japan-California Daily news," published in Los Angeles.

If it occurs to you that Mr. Yamasaki's English is not literally perfect, ask yourself how long it would take you to learn to write Japanese as well as he writes English.

Mr. Yamasaki speaks under the heading "On Getting Stung." He says:

"I grieve when I look back at the time I saw my steady kissing my boss, my best friend, just to keep her job. I tunned and stung, but just to keep earning my buck, I was forced by sheer politeness to say nothing. I hurried and told an acquaintance of mine; he laughed and said that he would be careful—and now his former mate is the boss's wife.

"Indeed, we live in a world of amazement, debauchery, trickery and broken confidence, in which the masses of the highest to the lowest orders are completely subdued and exploited by conmen and con-games.

"It is astonishing to know that a third of our great American public has, in some way or another, suffered from land, oil, mining or stock booms; that the second third is now being boomed successfully by means of fraudulent literature and advertising, by thousands of quacks, loan sharks, jury-fixers, and counter jumpers; and that the remaining third is in the arms of gold diggers."

All that is bad enough, especially the last line. But there is more. Mr. Yamasaki continues:

"Why, even the friendly neighbor, who solemnly promised to keep his eye peeled for you, would jump your claim—your favorite friend would take you out for a joy ride in a stolen auto—your sweetest girl would induce you to be a fall guy. Whatever we do, wherever we go, we are stung.

"This life of ours is a dilemnatic life; we must choose one of the awkward alternatives. Whichever one we take, we find that one of the horns will get the best of us."

Mr. Yamasaki has found words to express what many have thought since 1929.

'BIG SHOTS' ESCAPE IN CLEANUP

Herron Angry as City Sleuths Arrest Only Smaller Fry

BULLETIN.

Three men were arrested today in the investigation of the bombing of the Ban-Box, East Liberty night club.

Mayor Herron today agreed with those who don't think much of the first day's results in the cleanup he ordered the city detectives to stage.

The Mayor, moved to read the riot act to the sleuths because of the unsolved East Liberty racket bombings, agreed that the first-day swoops brought in only "small fry," although he had demanded big and little shots.

The Mayor said:

"I'm not so interested in the small-fry violators. It's my hope that we will be able to capture those who are responsible for this reign of terror, mainly the bombers. Nothing short of this will satisfy me. I will give the detectives a reasonable length of time to get results. It's my intention to have the police department follow along the same lines."

Asked what he'd do if the results were not forthcoming, he said:

"You watch!"

The results in Central Police Court today led to suspicion that perhaps the sleuths didn't hear correctly when the Mayor had them on the carpet yesterday.

Of the 29 men arrested in an alleged numbers joint in the Strip, one, Meyer Schwartz, 24, of Perry street, was held over. The others were freed.

Only one detective, Sigmund Gorskey, appeared against them. He said the place seemed "a sort of club" and produced numbers slips. But Magistrate Leo Rothenberg complained:

"Where's the evidence? You have nothing here."

Zeppo Marx, Wife Held In Closet as Bandits Flee With $28,000 Gems

MRS. ZEPPO MARX . . . SHE'S MARION BENDA, ROBBED AGAIN!

LOS ANGELES, June 2.—(AP.)—Zeppo Marx, of the brothers Marx, comedians, figures too much robbery is too much.

He was shy today the following articles of jewelry: A platinum ring set with a 12-carat stone and valued at $12,000; a platinum bracelet set with rubies and diamonds, valued at the same amount; a pair of platinum clasps, diamond-set, worth $4,000, and a $200 platinum pin set with diamonds.

That was the haul of a brace of holdup men who politely invaded the sumptuous Marx apartment here last night, covered Zeppo, his wife, a guest and a maid with weapons and rifled Mrs. Marx's jewel case. Mrs. Marx is the former Marion Benda.

It wouldn't have been so bad if the same stunt hadn't been pulled in the Marxs' absence about five months ago, when the loot was $37,500.

Said Zeppo:

"I'm tired, tired of being robbed."

He obtained no description of the robbers.

"No, I had a gun in the middle of my back during the entire visit."

The guest, Allan Miller, of New York, had arrived in Los Angeles only an hour before the robbery. He and the maid were bound and gagged and Marx and his wife were locked in the clothes closet.

After the men departed, Marx managed to open the door of the closet and notified police. The loss was covered by insurance.

Police surmised that the robbers were members of the same ring which robbed other film players in the last few months, including Helene Costello, Mae West and Betty Compson.

INCOME TAX RISE FOUGHT IN SENATE

Harrison Opens Battle For Radical Revision Of U. S. Job Bill

WASHINGTON, June 2—(INS.)—Radical revision of the taxing provisions in the industrial recovery bill, approved by the House, were proposed today by Senator Harrison (Dem.), of Mississippi, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

In order to raise the $200,000,000 annual revenue needed to finance the administration's $3,300,000,000 public works program, Harrison urged that all provisions for income tax increases be eliminated. In place of these he proposed:

1—A tax on the dividends of corporate stocks, "to be collected at the source at the time the corporation pays the dividends rather than waiting for the individual to pay the tax when he receives the dividends."

2—Elimination of private bankers from exemptions provided in the security loss section of the 1932 revenue act.

3—An amendment denying individuals the right to include in their personal returns the "distributive share" of partnership losses.

4—Enactment of a capital stock tax at the rate of one-tenth of one per cent upon the par value of capital stock.

5—An increase of one-half cent per gallon in the federal gasoline tax compared with the three-fourth cent increase approved by the House.

HITS PRIVATE BANKERS

Harrison said:

"Such a tax program as I have described will force some of the private banking concerns to pay a fair proportion of our tax burden, or it will force their incorporation so that they will pay

Held in Shooting

MRS. IRENE NEUBERGER

WIFE ARRESTED IN SHOOTING

Shots fired through her husband's bedroom door resulted in the arrest of Mrs. Irene Neuberger, 24, of 909 Reedsdale street, North Side, and her husband, Fred, 29, today. Both told Magistrate Ray Schneider in North Side Police Court the shooting was accidental.

The woman was held for court after she told the magistrate she did not have a permit to carry firearms.

Neuberger testified he was awakened by the three shots. He found his wife had fired a revolver accidentally in the hall, he said. The wife said she had just returned from their restaurant at 900 Shore avenue, and carried the weapon because she had $70 on her person.

BANKERS MADE MILLION SUPPORTING MARKET, WHITNEY TESTIFIES

International News Service.

Highlights in today's session of the J. P. Morgan inquiry by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee:

1—Morgan partners organized the so-called bankers' pool in the 1929 bull market crash. The pool stopped buying after three weeks and closed out in 1930 with net profit of more than $1,000,000, of which Morgan firm received less than $200,000.

2—Whitney, Morgan partner, admitted that the security companies and not the bankers, operated the pool and declared Morgan had sought to correct the impression that bankers were involved.

3—Whitney denied reports that London and Paris branches of Morgan & Co. sold United Corporation stock at cut-rates to any members of European royal families.

4—Justice John W. Kephart, of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, purchased stock from the Morgan firm through his wife.

5—Frank W. Stearns, close friend of the late President Coolidge, headed a long list of names of corporation officials given personal loans by the Morgan house. Most of the loans have been repaid. Also on the list were Richard Irvin, of Pittsburgh, and Representative E. W. Marland, of Oklahoma, formerly of Pittsburgh.

6—The investigation recessed until next Monday following a protest of John W. Davis, Morgan counsel, against a question directed at Thomas A. Lamont, junior partner, apparently relating to his income tax return.

Davis in Row With Probe Counsel

WASHINGTON, June 2.—(AP.)—The Senate Banking Committee was taken today behind the scenes of financial drama of the chaotic days of late '29 by a J. P. Morgan & Co. partner who told in matter-of-fact fashion how a few bankers—with $250,000,000 at their fingers—supported the crashing market.

It was a profitable operation, too.

George Whitney, the Morgan partner, testified that although loss had been expected, the 1,146,609 shares purchased were sold for $1,067,355 more than the cost, exclusive of interest.

Whitney's testimony furnished some tense moments in the hearing, which was abruptly recessed for the week-end after John W. Davis, counsel for the Morgan firm, protested against a question directed at Thomas A. Lamont, junior partner, apparently relating to his income tax return.

The white-haired Davis, former presidential candidate, leaped to his feet to object when Ferdinand Pecora, aggressive Senate committee counsel, called young Lamont to the stand and asked him about sales of stocks December 30, 1930.

Davis, asserting that Lamont

Seek to Link Royalty To List

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—King George, King Albert and Premier Mussolini figured in the Morgan investigation today.

George Whitney, Morgan partner, denied J. P. Morgan & Co. sold United Corporation stock at cut-rate prices to British royalty and French statesmen through the firm's London and Paris branches.

Whitney declared he had never heard that King George of England and King Albert of Belgium were on the Morgan list.

The Morgan partner said he didn't believe either ruler had participated in distribution of the United Stock. The same applied, he said, to high French politicians.

Whitney also denied Premier Mussolini of Italy was on the list.

QUIZZED BY REYNOLDS

Senator Reynolds (Dem.), of North Carolina, brought up the subject of the London and Paris lists of Morgan clients.

Reynolds first asked Whitney about the allotment of 15,000 units of United Corporation stock to Morgan, Grenfell & Co., the British firm. The value, said Whitney, was $1,125,000 at $75 a unit.

At that time the units were selling for $99 on the open market.

Reynolds pressed for the names of the British and French citizens who bought the stock, and Whitney said he would furnish the list later. Reynolds asked:

"Although you haven't at the present time knowledge of the specific distribution of the 27,000 units in Britain and France, don't you think, in view of the turmoil and conflict over the dollar, that it was unwise to give Europe any stock at this time, and in particular view of the fact that the Morgan firm is interested both here and abroad?"

Whitney said:

"It wasn't in 1929. I don't think that 27,000 units distributed in 1929 would have anything like the effect such a distribution would have now."

As Reynolds pressed for answers, Whitney said the firm "had no record" of King George, King Albert or Premier Mussolini on its original allotment lists. He added:

"Whether any of them might have later bought some of the securities, I don't know."

ROBOT PILOTING HAWKS OVER U.S.

LOS ANGELES, June 2.—(AP.)—Lieut. Com. Frank Hawks, flying a robot-controlled, 14-cylinder airplane, took off from the municipal airport early today on a non-stop flight to Floyd Bennett Field, Brooklyn.

He planned to test the automatic pilot and was not necessarily seeking a speed record.

His course lay over the Grand Canyon, south of Pueblo, Col., north of Kansas City and Indianapolis, over Pittsburgh and into Brooklyn.

Field attendants here said the flier probably would turn the machine over to the automatic pilot when he had gained his required altitude. He planned to fly at about 18,000 feet.

The robot pilot was expected to keep the machine on its course within a variation of two degrees—with much more exactness than a human pilot.

SANDY'S BATTLE TO HIGH COURT

Sagacious judges of the Pennsylvania Superior Court are to ponder the fate of Sandy.

Decision to appeal was announced today by Attorney Louis Little after Judge Frank P. Patterson had dismissed a writ of habeas corpus sought in behalf of Frank Sechan, North Versailles Township grocer, owner of the dog.

Judge Patterson in a four-page opinion ruled the questions involved should be carried by appeal to the higher court.

Sechan is at liberty under $500 bond. He was sentenced to six months in jail by Judge S. L. Reed, of Cambria County, because he refused to kill his dog in accordance with the court's order.

Sechan had pleaded guilty originally to keeping a ferocious dog, but had been paroled on condition that the dog die. The animal had bitten a 4-year-old boy of the neighborhood.

PROBER NAMES ROOSEVELT

WASHINGTON, June 2.—(AP.)—Maj. Gen. John L. DeWitt, quartermaster general of the Army, today told the Senate Military Committee that Robert Fechner, director of the reforestation work, advised him that President Roosevelt had instructed Fechner to purchase 200,000 toilte kits from Bevier & Co., of New York, for reforestation camp employes.

Louis McH. Howe, secretary to the President, apeparing before the committee at his own request yesterday, before it formally opened an investigation into the purchase of the kits at prices Army officials said were excessive, told members he had advised Fechner that he (Fechner) had authority to buy them it considered desirable.

Robbers Steal Safe Containing Liquor

Forcing entrance through a side door transom in Eighth street, robbers entered the Dow drug store, 723 Liberty avenue, early today and stole a 200-pound safe containing approximately $300 and 30 pints of liquor.

The robbery was discovered by the store manager, John J. O'Donnell. A small quantity of narcotics was dropped on the floor but none stolen.

Fraud Laid to Davis, Recall Demanded

WASHINGTON, June 2.—(INS.)—Demanding the recall of Norman H. Davis, America's roving Ambassador, Representative Tinkham (Rep.), of Massachusetts, declared in a speech in the House today that Davis "had been held guilty of fraud by the United States Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia."

Tinkham read the court decision as an answer to Representative Treadway (Rep.), of Massachusetts, who had asserted that Davis' life is "an open book."

The alleged fraud, totaling $35,000, was committed in the formation of a syndicate to buy the Las Ovas plantation in Cuba, Tinkham said.

The Las Ovas Company, suing Davis and his associates, charged that their syndicate bought the plantation secretly for $20,000 and agreed to sell it to the corporation they were organizing for $35,000. It also was charged that promoters' share of stock received by Davis and his associates were tainted with fraud.

Tinkham concluded:

"Upon this record and upon the record of his relations with J. Pierpont Morgan & Co., as developed by the Senate Committee on Banking, I demand that the present administration recall Norman H. Davis as the representative of the United States at Geneva and at London."

MORGAN QUIZ REVIVES DRAMA OF MARKET CRASH IN '29

BANKERS BOUGHT MILLION SHARES TO CHECK DROP, COMMITTEE TOLD

had not been advised he would be questioned about the stocks, said:

"This is not fair play."

While Lamont sat quietly at the table, and his senior partner—J. P. Morgan—listened intently from the background, Davis and Pecora argued the question.

Chairman Fletcher finally ruled the question was pertinent.

Lamont then said he did not recollect about the sales and he was directed to look them up over the week-end.

Davis asked Chairman Fletcher for a meeting of the committee Monday before the resumption of the inquiry, presumably to decide whether Pecora's question was pertinent.

Regarding the 1929 crash, Whitney testified the massive stock purchases lasted some three weeks. He said:

"It ended, as I recall, on November 11."

The witness objected to Pecora's use of the word "pool" to describe the transaction. He said:

"We are rather gunshy of the word, as used colloquially."

AID REQUESTED

Whitney said the stock purchased in the first market panic of October, 1929, was bought jointly but paid for individually by the partners. Whitney said:

"On the first day of chaos, the vice president of the New York Stock Exchange and several bank heads came to us. We decided to act in the hope of preserving order in the financial community.

"Those attending the conference before the operation was begun included Prosser, of the Bankers Trust; Potter, of the Guaranty; Wiggin, of the Chase National; Mitchell, of the National City, and George F. Baker, Jr., of the First National Bank."

Whitney named seven firms as participating in the operation: The First Securities Company, the Chase Securities Corporation, the Guaranty Company, the National City Company, the Bankers Company, Guggenheim Bros., and J. P. Morgan & Co.

Whitney said the meeting was called because of "chaos," wholesale "liquidation" and that the situation was gone over thoroughly on the afternoon of October 24, 1929.

He testified that there was no formal meeting called, but that the emergency brought the bankers together.

Whitney said:

"Richard Whitney came to see us first as I recall."

Richard Whitney, brother of today's witness, is president of the New York Stock Exchange.

Senator Couzens asked:

"How much did you buy?"

Whitney replied:

"We bought 1,146,609 shares at a cost of $137,752,705."

"We sold out in 1930 for $138,820,060."

Couzens asked:

"What was the profit?"

Whitney replied:

$1,067,366, exclusive of interest."

Pecora asked:

"Is it fair to say that all 37 stocks dealt in by the pool were companies in which your firm or other participants were interested through stock holdings or financing?"

Whitney replied that would be an accurate statement if confined to the 25 stocks in which there was most trading. He added:

"But that had nothing to do with the selection of the securities. They were among the most prominent stocks on the market and were pivotal or key stocks. We were trying to make order out of chaos."

WHITNEY RAPID

He was smoking more constantly and was answering some questions almost before they were uttered.

The senior Morgan partner now and again leaned forward, his eyes jumping back and forth between Pecora and Whitney.

Pecora asked if between October 24 and November 11, 1929, these were "violent fluctuations" in the market.

Whitney said:

"Fluctuations downward in a succession of breaks."

Often Morgan seemed to approve Whitney's swift replies with a paternal smile.

Pecora asked:

"There were a number of precipitate drops?"

Whitney said:

"That is very accurate. We sought to overcome a 'no-bid' market."

Pecora asked:

"Participants in the suspense operations assumed a big risk?"

Whitney answered:

"Yes, sir. But I think the belief held by every thoughtful person in New York was that if some action was not taken the losses would have been greater than the risk involved.

"There was no thought of any profit."

A while thereafter, Thomas S. Lamont—one of the younger partners of the Morgan company, was called to the stand, the third partner to testify.

While Lamont was being questioned by Pecora, John W. Davis, interrupted to protest. "This is not an orderly procedure," because the witness had not been informed of the subject on which he was being questioned and hence was not prepared to answer.

J. P. Morgan sat back with his hands clasped while the counsel argued.

Chairman Fletcher ruled that the question was pertinent and Pecora told Lamont to inform himself so he could answer it.

Shortly thereafter the hearing was recessed until Monday.

Although excused as a witness, J. P. Morgan told reporters:

"I think I'd like to see the end of this. I'm not certain but I think I'm coming back."

He hasn't testified since the first two days of the inquiry.

The partners instructed to return included Whitney, Thomas W. and Thomas S. Lamont, Arthur W. Anderson, Harold Stanley and William Ewing.

Coolidge Friend Given Morgan Personal Loan

WASHINGTON, June 2.—(INS.)—Frank W. Stearns, close confidential friend of the late President Coolidge, headed a long list of corporation officials given personal loans by J. P. Morgan & Co., it was revealed today when a list of such loans was made public at the Senate banking inquiry.

Other prominent corporation officials on the list included:

Louis H. Brown, president of Johns-Manville Corporation; Paul Dudley Childs, of Boston; Leon R. Clausen, of Racine, Wis.; Paul W. Fleischmann, of New York City; Charles Henry Hodges, of Detroit; Richard Irvin, of Pittsburgh; L. F. Loree, president of the Delaware and Hudson Railroad; John Markle, of Allentown, Pa.; Joseph Wilshire, president of Standard Brands, Inc., and E. L. Swearingin, of Louisville, Ky.

The list of borrowers through Drexel & Co. included: H. M. Atkinson, chairman of the Georgia Power Company, Atlanta; William duPont, Jr., Charles E. Hires, Jr., and Richard L. Binder, of Philadelphia; Andrew J. Maloney, president of the Reading Coal and Iron Company; Charles A. Smith, of Spokane; E. B. C. Markle, president of the Wilkes-Barre and Hazelton Railway, and J. Kearsley Mitchell, son-in-law of E. T. Statesbury.

Representative E. W. Marland, of Ponca City, Okla., was on the list, too. He paid off his loan in November, 1930.

The loan to Stearns was paid off in May, 1930. Most of the loans were marked "paid." A few are still outstanding.

Daniel J. Moran, of Ponca City, Okla., and R. E. Olds, of Detroit, also were listed as borrowers. Both paid off their loans in 1930.

MORGAN 'SANTA' ROLE DOUBTED

Object of Market Rescue Attempt Sought

By EDWIN C. HILL
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—Just how benevolent were J. P. Morgan & Co., and other big New York bankers who formed with the House of Morgan the gigantic "bankers' pool" that rushed to the rescue of the stock market after the great crash in the late fall of 1929?

Was it the milk of human kindness and an altruistic regard for investors in general that led them to throw $136,000,000 into the tumbling market in the course of some six months, instigate another brief and futile bull market in the summer of 1930, and emerge with a profit of a million dollars or so and the rescue of their own gravely imperilled investments?

Or was it just a case of plain, natural, human desire to save their own skins?

These are some of the startling questions, as this reporter learned exclusively today, that will be fired at J. P. Morgan and the Morgan partners within the course of the next three days—before the special inquisition into the affairs and operations of the imperial dynasty of Morgan comes to an end.

For the first time, this question is raised and by this same Ferdinand Pecora, who continues to manifest an attitude of doubt and suspicion as regards the altruism of the greatest of private banking houses.

For Pecora and the United States Senate Committee on Banking and Currency have in their possession—the famous little black trunk, which reposes always in Pecora's bedroom in the Hotel Continental here in Washington, or goes with him when he travels, or rests behind him as he grills the grand duke and nobles of the Morgan monarchy — certain evidence which leads them to think that it was a case of "take care of J. P. Morgan & Co." and other big banks that had investment affiliates, in throwing the enormous sum of $136,000,000 into the groggy, staggering market in order to restore the prices of Morgan stocks and securities in which the banks friendly to Morgan were heavily interested.

Hitherto, as far as this writer knows, the so-called "bankers' pool," formed by Morgan and representatives of the Chase National, the First National, the National City, the Guaranty Trust and a few other great banking houses immediately after a conference at 23 Wall street, the throne room of Morgan, has not been under suspicion.

The impression had become settled that the great bankers of New York, after weighty cogitation in those terrible days in late 1929, decided to throw in their resources to stabilize the market for the general good of business and everybody concerned.

But this Pecora—the pestiferous Pecora—seems to have another notion and has loaded another bomb to toss on the threshold of the House of Morgan.

It is, perhaps, melancholy to perceive such suspicion in the mind of Mr. Pecora, such suspicion of selfishness on the part of great bankers; but there it is, and it will surely come out.

And Mr. Morgan and his partners will have every opportunity to refute this suspicion when they are called to the stand today or Monday or next Tuesday.

But after all, sensational as this aspect of the inquisition may be or may not be—whether it turns out to be a first-class explosion of T. N. T. or merely a dud—Pecora is all set to establish what, after all, is the main and central purpose of the whole probe into the Morgan operations.

He is all set to establish that the House of Morgan has become such a financial dynasty as the world never knew before; that its influence or power or both was and is far greater than anybody, not on the inside, has imagined.

COURT UPHOLDS 'RED'S' OUSTER

The deportation order of the Department of Labor for Joseph Schaeffer, 37, native of Jugoslavia, was upheld yesterday by Federal Judge R. M. Gibson. The court ordered Schaeffer remanded to the custody of W. H. Marshall, director of immigration in this district, after a hearing in a habeas corpus suit.

The government charged Schaeffer was a member of an organization that advocated overthrow of the government. He was arrested February 2 at Bobtown, Greene County, by state police, who said extremist literature was found in his possession.

Schaeffer came to this country in 1911.

End of Labor Rackets, Sweatshop Evil Seen

Elimination of racket labor unions and sweatshop conditions can be effected by provisions of the industrial recovery measure now before Congress, H. I. Harriman, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, told an audience at a luncheon meeting of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce today.

Harriman said organized labor is demanding to sit in when the industrial code is established if labor helps form the code for industry, it is right for labor to file its own code. He said such a move would result in the elimination of the racket unions, the existence of which must be recognized.

He also said the code, by taking into consideration competition, low prices and low wages that create sweatshops, would eliminate sweatshop conditions.

Mr. Harriman refused to discuss possible changes that might develop in the code of ethics in business and industry as the final outcome of the Morgan and other

"There possibly will be temporary recessing in the recovery, but the swing to business recovery is definite and based on a sound economic basis. It will depend upon the co-operation of business."

Harriman was accompanied by Merle Thorpe, editor of Nation's Business.

NEW YORK, June 2.—(AP.)—Diego Rivera is preparing to move from his penthouse atop a hotel to more proletarian quarters in the New Workers' School, Fourteenth street. He said:

Rivera recently was ousted from his Radio City work when his murals proved objectionable to John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

KEPHART'S WIFE HIS AGENT IN STOCK DEAL

But, Morgan Bargain Offer Was Made to Jurist Himself

WASHINGTON, June 2.—(INS.)—Justice John W. Kephart, of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, purchased Alleghany and United Corporation stock from the House of Morgan through his wife, George Whitney, Morgan partner, testified today at the Senate banking inquiry.

Whitney said the invitation to buy the stocks was sent direct to Kephart.

The Kephart incident was brought up because Gov. Gifford Pinchot telegraphed Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel, asking for the facts. Pinchot reported that Kephart had denied buying the Morgan stocks.

Whitney first told about the sale of Alleghany stock to Kephart. He said:

"Our records show that while the allotment was extended to him, payment was made by his wife."

"To whom was the stock issued?"

"To his wife."

Then Whitney said that the invitation to buy United stock was sent to the Justice. Again, he added, Kephart's wife paid for the stock. Asked if the firm had received a request from Kephart to have the stock delivered to his wife, Whitney said:

"I suppose so—though that transaction was handled by Drexel & Co., in our Philadelphia office."

Pinchot Again Demands 'Morgan Tip' Jurists Quit

HARRISBURG, June 2.—(AP.)—Picturing them as "scrambling to pick up crumbs tossed from the rich man's table," Gov. Pinchot has repeated his demand for the resignation of Justices William I. Schaffer and John W. Kephart, of the Supreme Court.

He said last night it should be "quite unnecessary" to call a special session of the Legislature to consider impeachment of the jurists.

They are named as appearing on the "favored customer" list of the J. P. Morgan Company.

Declaring the "usefulness" of the justices to the state is at an end, the Governor declared:

"Even J. P. Morgan, drunk with power though he may be, would not want these men sitting on the Supreme Court in Pennsylvania now that the truth about their relationship with the Morgan Empire is known."

By its victory the blind team won the right to participate in finals, June 10, to determine the Boy Scout first-aid championship of Western Pennsylvania.

The blind Scouts were trained by C. I. Renz, safety supervisor of the Duquesne Light Company. Fred A. Hunt is scoutmaster. First-aid experts acted as judges.

MIDGET BRINGS CAMERA BAN

WASHINGTON, June 2.—(INS.)—Cameras were barred from the Senate Banking and Currency Committee session of the J. P. Morgan & Co. hearing today by order of Senator Fletcher (Dem.), of Florida.

The order was caused by yesterday's episode of photographers snapping Morgan with a circus midget in his lap.

Senator Fletcher had threatened to bar the photographers if newspapers published the photograph. Some papers did publish it and Senator Fletcher kept his word.

BEER TAX PUT AT 200 MILLION

NEW YORK, June 2.—(AP.)—Americans drank 1,500,000 barrels of legal beer in April, C. D. Williams, secretary of the United States Brewers' Association, reports.

They would have drank more if the brewers had been able to make it fast enough, he asserted, in making public the first official figures on beer production and sales.

Williams estimated that sale of beer during the 12 months ended April 1, 1934, will total 40,000,000 barrels, and that the following year's total will be 60,000,000, giving the federal government of at least $200,000,000 the first year and $300,000,000 the second.

AMHERST REDS BURN U. S. FLAG

AMHERST, Mass., June 2.—(AP.)—Five Amherst College freshmen were arrested by state police today, charged with burning a United States flag during a meeting of self-styled Communists on the campus yesterday.

Two of the students were suspended from the college.

The students arrested are Henry E. Stanley, of Providence, R. I.; Verun Hall, of Atlanta, Ga.; George F. Gillet, of Kenilworth, Ill., and Roger R. Wenderlich and Robert Lauren, both of New York City. The names of the students who were suspended were not made public by the college authorities.

The meeting in which the flag was burned was broken up by a larger group of students and three of the self-styled Communists were injured in the melee.

The Welfare Fund has leased old City Hall from the County Commissioners at a yearly rental of $5,000, it was announced today by William P. Witherow, president of the fund. The Welfare Fund will move offices into the building within a few days.

The move will bring about a saving and "co-ordination of function," Witherow said, adding:

"Centralized housing of the social agencies has been one of the major objectives of the Welfare Fund since its beginning five years ago."

U. S. TO PUSH MELLON TAX INQUIRY

Cummings Scans Data Supplied by Senate Hearings

WASHINGTON, June 2.—(AP.)—Attorney General Cummings said yesterday the Department of Justice was going ahead with its investigation of income tax payments of J. P. Morgan and Andrew W. Mellon.

Testimony before the Senate Banking Committee by the head of the House of Morgan is being analyzed, Cummings said, to determine whether there was any basis for prosecution. He added that so far as the Senate inquiry was helpful, the department was using its testimony, "but at the same time we are making our own investigation."

The attorney general announced several weeks ago that he was inquiring into charges of tax evasion by former Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, but this activity has not been concluded. Mr. Cummings said:

"This is the same course that was followed in the (Charles E.) Mitchell case which resulted in his prosecution. I am not predicting, however, that the result will be the same."

Mitchell, former chairman of the board of the National City Bank of New York, now is being tried on tax charges.

MITCHELL GIFT UNREPORTED

NEW YORK, June 2.—(AP.)—Frank J. Maguire, assistant secretary-treasurer of the National City Company, told a federal jury today that the company did not report either to the internal revenue department or to the state income tax bureau in Albany, payment of $666,666.67 on July 1, 1929, from a management fund to Charles E. Mitchell.

Testifying under cross-examination at the trial of the former chairman of the company and of the National City Bank on charges of income tax evasion, Maguire said that no report of payments to other officers of the company at the same time from the management fund was made either to federal or state authorities. In all $1,860,000, according to records of the company, now in evidence at the trial, was paid out July 1, 1929, to 11 officers.

GERMANS STOP DEBT PAYING

BERLIN, June 2.—(AP.)—Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the German Reichsbank, indicated today that early next week a moratorium would be declared on all German foreign debts, both long and short term.

At the conclusion of a five-day international conference with bankers, Dr. Schacht read to newspaper correspondents a joint communique issued by all the delegates. Then, his voice raised, he added:

"This puts the decision for further action straight up to the Reichsbank. Our decision, which is irrevocable, is that we will not permit further shrinkage of our gold and devisen (bills of foreign exchange)."

at least as much as our ordinary corporations.

"Such a program also will eliminate the necessity of increasing normal income taxes or surtaxes and will raise sufficient revenue to finance the public construction program proposed in the industrial recovery bill."

MORGAN NAMED

Harrison declared the security loss section favoring private bankers should be eliminated "in view of the revelations by the Morgan investigation." He added:

"Private bankers should be denied the privilege of deducting these short-term losses from their ordinary incomes."

The amendments which he proposed forbidding individuals to spread their share of partnership losses on their individual income tax returns, Harrison asserted:

"Would have a very great effect in a case similar to that brought out in the Morgan testimony."

'When the Wall Street Plums Are Falling—'

By GEORGE E. PHAIR

In that orchard bright and sunny
Where the plums of Wall Street bloom,
Sat a Master Mind of money,
And his heart was like a tomb.
He was lonely as he pondered
On his playmate far away
Where the wide Potomac wandered
In the twilight dim and gray.

And his lonely voice was calling
Through the evening shades of blue,
"When the Wall Street plums are falling
I am thinking, dear of you."

DRASTIC CHANGE IN MOVIES URGED FOR YOUTH'S SAKE

SEX AND CRIME FILMS CITED IN ATTACK

Hibben Report Scores Unhealthy Status Of 'Picture' Schools

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, June 2.—Necessity for drastic changes in motion pictures in the interests of the youth of the nation is indicated in the all-embracing report of the four-year investigation of the Motion Picture Research Council, just completed under the chairmanship of the late John Grier Hibben.

Twenty phychologists and sociologists conclude that "motion pictures exert a profound influence on the habits and behavior of children."

The scientists further conclude that "the content of current commercial motion pictures constitutes a valid basis for apprehension about their influence upon children."

Results of the study will be published in nine volumes by MacMillan this year. A summary of the studies by Henry James Forman was published yesterday under the title, "Our Movie-Made Children."

PUBLIC SERVICE SEEN

Dr. Hibben, in approving the advance report, which he signed the day before his death, said:

"The council believes that these studies will render a constructive public service. The conclusion reached by the research director, Dr. W. W. Charters, of Ohio State University, is indorsed by the council. Dr. Charters stated that 'current commercial motion pictures present a critical and complicated situation in which the deep interest, keen intelligence and sincere co-operation of producers, parents and public are needed to discover how to use them to the best advantage in the development of children."

OBSERVATION KEEN

"On the basis of the research findings, the scientists conclude that 'the motion picture is powerful to an unexpected degree in affecting the information, attitudes, emotional experiences and conduct patterns of children.

"'A parent who is a superior adult,' they say, 'can count upon his young child to see three out of five things he (the parent) sees in a film; his 11 or 12-year-old child see three out

HINT KIDNAPING OF AIMEE'S AIDE

LOS ANGELES, June 2.—(AP.)—Into the records of Angelus Temple, scene of perennial turbulence in material affairs, there was written today the disappearance of a follower of Evangelist Aimee Semple McPherson-Hutton, with the possibility of her having been kidnaped.

Missing since last Wednesday, Mrs. Hazel Josephine Caldwell, an official in the Temple Sunday School and wife of Sherman Caldwell, member of the board of elders, has written letters to her family couched in vague language, but indicating she is on a philosophical-religious journey.

Written and telephoned threats by an unidentified person have been made to Willedd Andrews, attorney, who, with Miss Harriet Jordan, holds power of attorney from Mrs. McPherson-Hutton. Miss Jordan last Saturday was formally installed as temple business manager, a post from which the evangelist's husband, David L. Hutton, Jr., was deposed a year ago.

JOHN PIERPONT MORGAN . . . . THE MOST INTERESTED SPEC TATOR AS THE U. S. SENATE DELVES INTO HIS LIFE BUSINESS

STONING HOME, MAN SHOT

ROCHESTER, Pa., June 2.—Fired upon by a Harmony Township resident as he is alleged to have attempted to batter the door of a home, a man who identified himself as John Doukzoas, 40, of 944 James street, North Side, is in the Rochester Hospital with bullet wounds in the arms and leg.

Ambridge police said the man, apparently suffering hallucinations, was fired upon by A. W. Hebb, of 2560 Beaver road, Harmony Township, after he threw several milk bottles through a glass paneled door in Hebbs' home.

He said he had never seen Doukzoas before.

'NINI' TO FIGHT DIVORCE RULE

PROVIDENCE, R. I., June 2.—(Universal.)—"Nini" Woodward Jelke has reopened her divorce battle, and her claim to a share in the millions of her Newport clubman husband, F. Frazier Jelke, with the announcement here that she will seek additional funds to carry the case to the Supreme Court.

"Nini's" counsel declared he will file a petition in Superior Court here today, asking for increased allowance for his pretty client, and additional counsel fees and expenses, with a view to bringing the case before the state's highest legal tribunal.

"Nini's" divorce petition and the petition of her husband were simultaneously denied by Judge Charles A. Walsh, after a dramatic hearing which attracted to the courtroom the elite of Newport society.

Judge Walsh's rejection of both suits leaves "Nini" just where she started—the wife of Jelke, without benefit of the $600 monthly alimony he has been paying her by court order.

PINCHOT'S WIFE HITS LOW PAY

LEBANON, Pa., June 2.—(AP.)—Asserting that while "there are no chain gangs in sweatshops," Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of the Governor, last night told a crowd at an open-air meeting that "the story of the sweatshop is quite as horrible and terrible."

Declaring "pitiful wages" are paid in Central Pennsylvania cities, she cited York, Lancaster, Lebanon and Allentown among others.

Turning her guns on bankers and large manufacturers, she declared they largely are responsible for the depression because of what she said was their greed.

Running Gun Fight In Hills Brings Call for Reinforcements

BULLETIN.

SILOAM SPRINGS, Ark., June 2.—(AP.)—Lewis Bechtel, one of the 11 convicts who escaped from the Kansas Penitentiary Tuesday, was captured at noon today at a farm house one and one-half miles from Dripping Springs, Okla. He admitted his identity. Posses were close behind two of his companions.

MIAMI, Okla., June 2.—(AP.)—A posse led by Sheriff Carl Curtis, of Delaware County, engaged a group of men, thought to be fleeing Gansas convicts, in a running fight in the hills 20 miles south of Jay today, Curtis reported to Sheriff Dee Watters here.

Curtis said the posse routed the fugitives, from their automobile and they fled on foot. No one was wounded, he said.

He asked for reinforcements and Sheriff Watters arranged to leave immediately with all available Ottawa County officers.

It could not be learned how many men were in the fleeing Watters said the men apparently were those who escaped from a Siloam Springs (Ark.), posse late Wednesday night after a gun fight.

The point where Curtis said today's encounter occurred is a few miles west of Siloam Springs in an extremely rugged and remote section.

HOLD UP BANK

CHELSEA, Okla., June 2.—The reckless killers and robbers who broke from the Kansas State Penitentiary at Lansing during a Memorial Day baseball game are blamed for killing a Chetopa (Kan.), officer; have stolen and commandeered numerous motor cars; held a half dozen men and women as temporary hostages; engaged in running gunfights with manhunters and climaxed their contempt for the law late yesterday with the $2,100 robbery of a Chelsea bank.

Not so elusive were the two convicted killers, Jim Stribling and H. D. Bradbury, who fled from the Oklahoma prison at McAlester late Wednesday with the arms and automobile of a guard. They were caught last night at Stuart, 20 miles west of the penitentiary, by two marshals who surprised them trying to board a train. They had abandoned the guard's motor car on a mountain road.

BONN, Germany, June 2.—A telegram from former Kaiser Wilhelm, inferentially disclosing his violent opposition to the union, today threw a pall over preparations for the marriage tomorrow of his grandson, Prince Wilhelm, of Prussia, to Dorothea Van Salviati, a commoner.

On the eve of the wedding, the ex-kaiser peremptorily withdrew imperial patronage from the nuptials by ordering Prince Hubertus, third son of the former crown prince, who had been scheduled to represent the royal house, to remain away from the ceremony.

The former kaiser opposed the marriage from the start. But recent reports indicated he had relented and at least tacitly sanctioned the action of his favorite grandson in tossing a potential imperial crown into the Rhine to marry the girl of his choice.

The telegram to Prince Hubertus, however, left no doubt that Wilhelm is deeply concerned over what he terms a "mesalliance."

Prince Wilhelm for many years has been considered by monarchists as one of the most likely candidates for the throne of Potsdam in the event of a Hohenzollern restoration. He is the eldest son of former Crown Prince Friedrich Wilhelm.

Thrilled over the approaching marriage, Fraulein Von Salviati remained in high spirits and took the snub from Doorn with a philosophic smile.

Her fiance, however, was downhearted and obviously deeply offended. His grandfather's precipitiate action was unexpected, as the former Crown Prince and Crown Princess have unofficially sanctioned the nuptials, sending wedding gifts and inviting the newlyweds to visit them at their estate in Oels, Silesia, after their honeymoon.

MOLLISONS SET FOR OCEAN HOP

LONDON, June 2.—(AP.)—Everything is in readiness for the flight Capt. and Mrs. James A. Mollison plan to make soon to New York, Mollison said today. He added:

"At the moment it looks doubtful if the weather will be suitable for a start on Monday, but as soon as conditions are favorable we will leave Croydon for New York."

Great Britain's famous flying couple plan a non-stop flight to New York as the first of a series of attempts to establish three new air records, the first London-New York flight, the first round-trip North Atlantic crossing and the world's long-distance mark.

Capt. and Mrs. Mollison, the former Amy Johnson, plan to rest in New York one day, fly non-stop to Bagdad and from there to England.

POOL INSPECTED BY ROOSEVELT

WASHINGTON, June 2.—(INS.)—President Roosevelt inspected his new swimming pool today, and after placing a hearty stamp of approval on it he held an informal reception for the workmen who constructed it.

En route to the executive offices of the mansion, Mr. Roosevelt stopped in to find the pool filled with water and ready for use.

If engagements permit, the executive hopes to be able to give the pool its initial tryout this afternoon.

MOTIVE SOUGHT IN BATHTUB DEATH

Police Charge Murder As Stanford Voices Shocked Protest

By RALPH B. JORDAN
International News Service.

SAN JOSE, Cal., June 2.—A motive was sought today in the mysterious Stanford University campus bathtub death of Mrs. Alene Thorpe Lamson, 28, college dramatic and social favorite, and executive secretary of the University Y. W. C. A.

Authorities insisted that the beautiful young woman was murdered, despite shocked protests from the famous seat of learning.

Her husband, David A. Lamson, was held in jail here, but no charge has been preferred against him.

The Rev. David Charles Gardner, chaplain of the university, who married the Lamsons in a social event a few years ago, said there never had been a hint of a quarrel in the Lamson home. He said:

"They were a Romeo and Juliet couple. "David was a bold suitor, never afraid to slip his arm about Alene to escort her across the campus.

"Their courtship was beautiful. Alene was as dainty and highly colored as a Dresden doll, a delicate, spiritual creature.

"Their devotion was exceptional."

MURDER WARRANT LOOMS

District Attorney Frederick Thomas and his aide, Deputy A. P. Lindsay, however, said they had "practically determined" to issue a warrant against Lamson, but "in view of the prominence of this man and because murder is such a serious charge," they want to be "absolutely certain" that Mrs. Lamson, whose nude body was found in a bathtub in the Lamsons' campus home Memorial Day, was not a victim of accidental death, a fall which crushed her skull.

Lindsay said:

"I'm sure it is murder."

Undersheriff Earle Hamilton said he would take a squad of deputies today to Stanford University and Palo Alto, nearby town, to complete the checking up process and confer with the District Attorney on his return relative to the warrant.

PLAYS SOLITAIRE

There was a possibility that an inquest might be held late today or tomorrow in Palo Alto, the hearing having been delayed pending the completion of a civil case here in which former Congressman Arthur Free, Lamson's attorney, is appearing. Free said he hoped to finish his civil suit by noon.

Lamson spent yesterday, according to his jailors, playing solitaire and eating regularly, although his attorney said he was still suffering severely from shock and was too hysterical to see newspapermen.

He had as dinner visitors his sister, Dr. Margaret Lamson, Palo Alto physician, and two men friends, who carried baskets of food and thermos bottles into the cell.

Lamson's associates continue to rally to his support. Mary Roberts, a nursemaid in his home, located by International News Service, said she never had seen such a devoted couple as the Lamsons.

Hearing Arranged For Ex-Postmaster

Earl W. Hopkins, 37, former postmaster at Leetsdale, was placed under $500 bond yesterday by the United States Commissioner, pending a hearing Wednesday on a charge of embezzlement of $970.40. He was postmaster eight years. The alleged shortage was discovered January 20 by postoffice inspectors.

U.S. LEADERSHIP BRINGS ATTACK ON BRITAIN

LONDON, June 2.—(AP.)—The Labor party attacked Chancellor of the Exchequer Neville Chamberlain and the government in the House of Commons today for allowing the world economic conference initiative to "go to the United States."

Sir Stafford Cripps, Labor spokesman, demanded:

"Are we only to follow the suggestions by Mr. Roosevelt, who undoubtedly is a very remarkable man? Is it necessary for him to have a monopoly on initiative for the world conference?

"Hasn't the British government any ideas of their own or are they just prepared to follow along with the suggestions Mr. Roosevelt gave Prime Minister MacDonald?"

WARNS NATIONS

The Labor attack was launched in the course of a foreign affairs debate in which Mr. Chamberlain had asserted that unless the nations temper their prejudices and adopt a give-and-take attitude at the economic conference, the world may despair "of emerging in our time from depression, hardships and suffering."

The war debts to the United States played a part in the discussion, the chancellor once again refusing to disclose the British policy, intimating that the government awaited a new move from Washington.

TALK DEFAULT

Sir Stafford declared that the British people would at one time have held up their hands in horror at the idea of repudiating the American war debt, but "now they talk with complete equanimity of not paying June 15."

The labor spokesman complained that 12 days before payment was due all the British government had to say was that America was in full possession of the British view.

He declared that it would have been better weeks ago for the British to have risked upsetting feelings in the United States by firmly and decisively stating the British view. An installment of $75,950,000 is due June 15.

U. S. Bars Debt Talk At London Parley

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service.

ABOARD S. S. ROOSEVELT, At Sea, June 2.—The United States will insist upon keeping discussion of foreign debts out of the World Economic Conference, Secretary of State Cordell Hull emphasized today as members of the American delegation and experts accompanying them held their first formal meeting at sea.

Secretary Hull, chief of the American delegation, declared he plans to conform strictly to the agenda of the conference, in which debts have no part.

Whatever debt proposals are made in London will merely be relayed to Washington for consideration by President Roosevelt, Hull said.

The American delegates plan to present no concrete program to the London conference, since it is felt the preliminary Washington talks have clarified the steps needed for economic rehabilitation.

An effort will be made to establish at least de facto stabilization between the pound sterling, dollar and franc at a "reasonable level," it was said, this to be determined by mutual assent.

Cuban Politician Dies Of Gun Battle Wounds

HAVANA, June 2. — (AP.) — Oscar Montalvo, member of the House of Representatives, died today as a result of wounds received in a political pistol fight in the new Cuban Capitol yesterday.

Col. Felipe Sanchez, retired army officer, a bystander who also was gravely wounded in the shooting, was receiving treatment in a hospital here today. He was not a participant in the fight.

TRADE MEN HIT HIGH TARIFFS

VIENNA, Austria, June 2.—(AP.)—High protective tariffs were assailed from all sides at today's session of the Congress of the International Chamber of Commerce, with particular emphasis on the American variety of such barriers to international trade.

Clark H. Minor, of New York, president of the International General Electric Company, joined other speakers in blaming tariffs for the breakdown of world commerce.

The delegates attached especial importance to his declaration that the most-favored-nation clause should be abandoned temporarily, as conditions under which it could operate constructively are absent.

Aging Sherwood

RUSSELL T. SHERWOOD

SHERWOOD SET TO 'TELL ALL'

HOBOKEN, N. J., June 2.—Russell T. Sherwood is ready to go before any tribunal and tell everything he knows because he is determined the time has come to save himself.

He intends to maintain a staunch loyalty to James J. Walker, though deeply resentful of what he considers the former Mayor's disloyalty to him. His immediate concern is not James J. Walker, but Russell T. Sherwood.

That, he made clear, is why he has come back after 21 months of wandering around this country with his bride, hiding under an assumed name.

Submitting to a press inquisition today the white-haired accountant consistently maintained that at no time did he ever come across anything that could point to graft or acceptance of bribes by Walker.

His transactions in behalf of Betty Compton, now Walker's wife, were strictly personal and had no bearing on the former Mayor.

No testimony of his, had he appeared before the investigating committee, could have damaged Walker as Mayor.

Pittsburgher Slain, Man Faces Trial

SALT LAKE CITY, June 2.—(AP.)—A charge of first degree murder was filed against Chester Hougensen, 34, here yesterday in connection with the shooting of Frank Miller, 32, of Pittsburgh, Pa., during a quarrel in a coffee shop early Tuesday.

Detective W. C. Smith, who signed the complaint, said Hougensen contended he fired in self-defense when Miller attacked him with a knife in a dispute over alleged attention paid Mrs. Miller by Hougensen.

German Birth Rate Increase Drive On

BERLIN, June 2.—(INS.)—An "advisory board on racial policy" was appointed today by Dr. Wilhelm Frick, Reich minister of the interior.

It is to help prepare measures to increase the German birth rate to "prevent the alienation" of the German people (adopt steps to check the marriage of Jews and non-Jews) and safeguard the nation "qualitatively and spiritually."

Man Fatally Shot, Brother-in-Law Held

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., June 2.—(INS.)—Roy Eames, 40, of Wophononick, Altoona suburb, was fatally shot here today in a cottage at Dysart, Cambria County. His brother-in-law, C. H. Herman, of Altoona, held by police pending investigation, said the shooting was accidental.

Reich Refuses to Sign Mussolini Peace Pact

GENEVA, June 2.—(AP.)—Last-minute difficulties have developed in connection with Premier Mussolini's four-power peace pact, it was reported here today.

Germany will not sign the pact, it was understood, until she knows whether France will reduce her war materials.

(The Mussolini plan, first announced last March, has been held up while negotiations went forward to meet objections made by various nations, particularly the French. The purpose of the pact is to associate Great Britain, France, Germany and Italy in common policies to protect European peace.)

Where and when to hold political negotiations necessary to solve the critical problems of disarmament are worrying League of Nations officials and Norman H. Davis, American ambassador-at-large.

Foreign Minister Joseph Paul Bonour has invited Davis to Paris for a triangular parley which would include either Sir John Simon or Lord Londonderry as representative of Great Britain.

The date of this meeting in Paris has not been fixed. It was reported that disarmament also will be tackled on the sidelines of the world economic conference in London. Davis is not a delegate to the London parley.

SENATE PERILS ROOSEVELT'S VET CUT

WASHINGTON, June 2.—(AP.)—Overturning administration forces, the Senate today by a vote of 59 to 21 suspended its rules to permit consideration of an amendment to the independent offices bill limiting to 15 per cent any cut in compensation of veterans with service-connected disabilities.

The amendment would eliminate $190,000,000 out of the $500,000,000 reduction in veterans expenditures sought by Roosevelt.

Previously, Senator Byrnes (Dem.), South Carolina, in charge of the measure, had issued a statement accepting the Cutting amendment limiting to 25 per cent the cuts that could be made.

The Senate hoped to reach a vote late today.

Meanwhile, plugging steadily toward adjournment, Congress completed action on another important measure today—the Peyser-Wagner bill setting up a new national employment service.

The employment legislation, asked by Secretary Perkins, was sent to the White House when the Senate accepted minor House amendments.

On the other side, the House started debate on the administration's railroad reorganization bill with indications that a vote would come tomorrow.

The House Judiciary Committee approved a measure to enable municipalities to obtain court sanction of debt readjustments over protests of a minority of the creditors and the House Ways and Means Committee continued study of the proposed federal oil regulation legislation.

CONGRESS' 'BRAINS' PRAISED

WASHINGTON, June 2.—(INS.)—Members of Congress—despite the taunts of their critics—are superior people, according to Dr. Arthur MacDonald, Washington brain specialist.

After measuring the brains of 89 members of Congress he intimated they would fare very well in comparison to physicians, ministers and other professional people.

Dr. MacDonald, however, paid them a doubtful compliment by issuing a comparison between 360 insane persons and members of Congress.

This comparison showed the members of Congress in a splendid light. For example, the physician found the Congressmen have a breadth-of-head index of 156 as compared to 151 for the insane. He said:

"Members of Congress are much superior people in general. They are frequently underrated, and unjustly so.

"If the lawyers' errors, the physicians' mistakes and the preachers' errors were published from time to time, like the Congressman's, how would these gentlemen compare?"

Dr. MacDonald last year measured the brain capacity of Senators and members of the House of Representatives, in which the former showed to advantage.

DEFICIT BILLION LESS THAN 1932

WASHINGTON, June 2.—(INS.)—Uncle Sam completed the eleventh month of the 1933 fiscal year with a deficit a billion dollars lower than on May 31, 1932, the Treasury announced today.

The excess of expenditures for the period was $1,648,232,700.

Expenditures were reduced by the amazing total of $978,000,000 as compared with last year and amounted to $3,477,500,000.

Heavy losses from income taxes were offset by foreign debt payments last December and new taxes, including revenue from beer, so that receipts of $1,793,267,000 were $23,000,000 higher than in the same 11 months in 1932.

The public debt at the end of May was $21,853,385,000, an increase of $2,817,000,000 in a year and compared with $26,596,701,000 at the peak of August 31, 1919.

Bebe's Annoyer Escapes Hospital

PHOENIX, Ariz., June 2.—(AP.)—Albert Holland, 35, who was confined in the Arizona State Hospital here several months ago, after allegedly annoying Bebe Daniels, screen actress, in Los Angeles and San Francisco, was at liberty again today, the Sheriff's office reported.

Holland slipped away from guards while he and other hospital patients were enjoying a walk.

POLITICS OUSTS HERO'S WIDOW

The apparent efforts of the Coyne-Herron administration to strengthen their political machine for the September primaries had left Mrs. Olive Frazier, widow, of 5241 Dresden way, Tenth Ward, without a job today.

She was notified by Mayor John S. Herron Wednesday that her services as stenographer-clerk in the Traffic Court would no longer be required.

In her place today was Miss Mary McCann, also of the Tenth Ward.

No reason was set forth in Mrs. Frazier's notice of dismissal. Her political sponsor was reported to have announced for Council on an anti-Coyne ticket. Traffic Court clerkships are not under civil service.

Mrs. Frazier's husband, Henry Frazier, a city fireman, was killed at the Atlantic Refining Company fire eight years ago. She supports a daughter.

NUDIST STENOG LOSES FEAR OF MEN

(This is the third of a series of articles written after a first-hand study of the nudist movement in America.)

By LEIGH MATTESON,
International News Service.

NEW YORK, June 2.

"What sort of persons, socially and spiritually, are among the new large group of Americans being converted to nudism this year by those enterprising ex-clergymen, Drs. Henry S. Huntington and Ilsley Boone, of Scarsdale, N. Y., and Otis, Mass.?"

When this question arose during the investigation of nudism as it emerged this year from its undercover existence in the United States, answers were sought in interviews with the converts themselves, as they sat about naked at camps and gymnasiums.

Previous converts also were consulted. Among these was Dr. Maurice Parmalee, Ph. D., former lecturer on economics and sociology at New York and Columbia universities, and author of a book on nudism in Germany, land of the cult's origin.

HIGHER TYPE NUDISTS

Dr. Parmalee said:

"The majority of new members this year are of a higher type than the majority attracted to the practice during the previous two years of nudism in America.

"In the beginning here, as in Germany, a large portion of the first nudist groups recruited members from the 'lunatic fringe' of the population and among the faddists who indulge in anything sufficient fantastic.

"This year, however, the saner, wholesomer type of persons are in the great majority."

An advertising man, connected with one of the larger New York agencies, sat up on his blanket to give his "slant." He said:

"Unless I get out in the sun a lot during the summer, I'm bothered all winter with nasal catarrh and congestion.

"This year I can't afford much time at the beaches. And I have no pent-house terrace. And anyway, I like to see women around, and men, as you do at beaches. So here I am."

A young woman stenographer gave "testimony" thus:

"I needed a way of getting cheap week-end vacations, with lots of sunshine, and I wanted to get over my terrible shyness and awkwardness with men.

"In two week-ends at this camp I have got over all my fear of men, although none of the young men have interested me seriously in the slightest."

MOTHER ENJOYS LIFE

A mother with two young children, one an infant at arms, said:

"My husband talked me into this. I was very nervous about this nudist business at first, but when I met the other people and saw how they acted I got so I am enjoying myself a lot. I am having a good time sitting around naked with a lot of other women and men. They seem friendlier and at the same time more conventional than dressed folks."

Two middle-aged lawyers and a retired contractor also were at this camp. They had joined partly for their health, partly out of curiosity and partly out of loneliness, as none had families.

The younger single men were like all other sorts of young, single men, interested in making a lot of racket and bounding about at games and exercises and showing off for the benefit of the girls.

Several were young commercial artists and spent much of their time making sketches of the landscape or nudist scenes.

At this camp were gathered a group of nudists who could not afford to spend more than $5 or $6 for a week-end's expense. At other more expensive camps a large proportion of the nudists are men and women in their twenties and early thirties, both married and single.

These latter practitioners of nudism are chiefly recruited from the professional and semi-professional classes of the population, such as writers, artists, college professors and instructors.

NEW LAW CUTS 'CARPETBAG' JUDGE COST

Bills designed to make "carpetbag" judges less costly for the taxpayers became laws today by virtue of Gov. Pinchot's signature.

State budget officers predicted the amount paid the traveling judges each year would be reduced $50,000. One measure cuts their pay from $30 to $20 a day. A second requires them to keep itemized accounts of their expenses and forbids them from going outside their home districts until their own work is completed.

WAY CLEAR FOR LOANS

The way was cleared for Allegheny County to borrow funds from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to construct new bridges at Homestead and Aspinwall. Gov. Pinchot signed the bill of Senator Mansfield, Allegheny County, authorizing the county to levy tolls to aid in financing bridge construction. The law governing R. F. C. loans requires that projects for which loans are made must be self-liquidating.

The Governor vetoed the Sowers bill authorizing county courts to stop, until February 1, 1935, the sale of property on first mortgage foreclosures. He said it provided no relief from sales on foreclosures of second and third mortgages.

OTHER BILLS SIGNED

Pinchot signed the Williamson bill, permitting tax collectors, secretaries and treusurers of school districts to deposit collateral instead of surety bonds; requiring the Welfare Department to provide special education for feeble minded children; permitting the State Council of Education to regulate issuance of certificates to estudents and graduates of state teachers' colleges; discontinuing teachers' institutes and providing for teachers' meetings at county expense.

HOSPITAL FUND BILL SIGNED

HARRISBURG, June 2.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot today signed the Gorman (Lehigh) bill appropriating to state-aided hospitals the $2,231,365 of their 1933-35 total which is conditioned on voters' approval of the proposed $25,000,000 bond issue in November.

The balance of the hospital appropriations—the amounts the institutions will get regardless of the fate of the bond issue—is contained in other bills upon which the Governor has not acted.

Amounts for hospitals in the Gorman bill:

Allegheny General, Pittsburgh, $54,320.
Allegheny Valley, Tarentum, $5,880.
Beaver Valley General, New Brighton, $4,660.
Belvedere, Pittsburgh, $1,090.
Braddock General Hospital, $14,130.

Elizabeth Steel Magee, Pittsburgh, $13,500.

State Road Patrol To Get Automobiles

HARRISBURG, June 2.—(AP.)—Automobiles of the roadster type will replace motorcycles for highway patrol sergeants. The Department of Revenue yesterday bought 35 six-cylinder roadsters of the less expensive type to be used by sergeants in supervising patrol work.

FREE OUTINGS AT 3 PARKS OFFERED

Happy days, picnic days, are here again. Scores of school picnics are scheduled for June, July and August at Kennywood, West View and Olympia amusement parks.

The Sun-Telegraph has worked out a plan by which every boy and girl—even the men and women—may have a full day's outing at any one of these beautiful parks, everything free with ample refreshments added.

The Sun-Telegraph plan gives to its readers strips of tickets for 10 to 15 rides, with shows and refreshments added.

Send your name and address in a letter or a postal card to the Outing Department, Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa., and state which park you prefer. You will get by return mail a letter telling just what you have to do to participate in this free all-day outing.

Boys and girls can go with their own school picnic party if they wish, for the Sun-Telegraph tickets are good for any day, Sunday and holidays excepted, and they are also good for "Ma" and "Dad" or for the big brothers and sisters, cousins and aunts.

C'mon! Let's all go to the picnic.

30 SIGN TO GO ON PILGRIMAGE

Father Cox is closing arrangements for his annual pilgrimage to Rome. He has already booked about 30 Pittsburghers for the trip, which promises to be of unusual interest as this is Holy Year. The Father Cox party will be given an audience by the Pope and after viewing the wonders of Rome will go on to Lourdes to participate in the ceremonies arranged for the diamond jubilee of this world famous shrine. He expects many more to join the pilgrimage before he sails from New York on June 28, departing from Pittsburgh, June 27.

On account of the success of his recent Holy Year cachet he is also sponsoring a commemorative to be mailed from Lourdes, July 16. These are available to all stamp collectors and others who send their name and address to Father Cox at Old St. Patrick's Church with a donation of 25 cents for his breadline.

Father Cox is having another successful week in his drive for Sun-Telegraph subscriptions. It is from this campaign that he gets the greater part of his cash to feed the breadline of 3,000 destitute men and boys who come to Old St. Patrick's every noon for their regular daily meal. Every subscription that comes in on the blank on this page or is telephoned in with the request that Father Cox be given credit for it, brings to his unemployment relief fund a liberal cash commission.

You—who haven't a telephone—will be interested in this. And you who have will agree: • It's not alone its convenience in running daily errands that makes a telephone worth its cost. It's not alone the satisfaction it gives in bringing you news and keeping you in touch. • Even more important is the protection it affords. Fire may break out . . . thieves may break in . . . accidents may happen. THEN only the telephone can summon aid with least delay. • And for that reason alone it more than earns its keep!

You can have a telephone in your home for less than 10 cents a day!

MOVIE CHANGES FOR CHILDREN'S SAKE URGED

of four; and his 15 or 16-year-old to catch nine out of 10.'

"What children see at the movies they retain in memory to an entirely unexpected degree.

"All of the considerations of the findings, the report agrees, 'lead inevitably to the increasing strength of the conclusions that the motion picture is an extremely powerful medium of education.'

CONCERN TO PARENTS

"In view of these and similar facts that were discovered concerning the effectiveness of the film as an instrument with which to reach the child's mind and emotions, 'the content of the pictures becomes a matter of deep concern to parents.

"If the commercial movies re-enforce the training of the home, the school and the church, parents have cause for deep satisfaction. If they conflict with the teachings of these agencies, parents who believe in the teachings of the home, the school and the church will be seriously disturbed.'

"The research concludes that in large part current films do conflict with the teachings and standards of these agencies. 'The big three among the movie themes in 1930 were, love, 29.6 per cent; crime, 27.4 per cent, and sex, 15 per cent."

MUCH KILLING SHOWN

"'In 115 pictures selected at random in 1932 as they appeared in the theaters of Columbus, O., 59 showed killing technique of a wide variety. The revolver was used in 22, knifing in nine, hanging, stabbing, beating to death, drowning, lynching, machine-gunning, strangling and six other methods in less than five pictures each, making a total of 18 varities of exits from the movie scenes of action.'

"After noting other objectionable matter revealed by the content analysis, the scientists conclude, 'This is rather a sorry layout for the children to see when they go to the movies.' They find that the films have a profound influence on youthful conduct, leading to delinquency and crime."

CHILDREN IMITATE

The committee proposes, after the findings are published, to make recommendations and take steps to influence the movie output in both the educational and entertainment field.

In "Movie-Made Children," Forman says:

"Children imitate movies in love-technique, flirtation, kissing, caressing, 'vamping,' 'necking.'

"Some of these things enter into the day dreams of adolescents which may stimulate impulses and whet appetites. In this way movies tend to become a school of conduct for children and adolescents.

"Many young people sympathize with the criminal in motion pictures, but many, too, imitate mannerisms and ways of conduct.

"Motion pictures, however, at times can and do, according to the evidence, have an effect of deterring young people from crime, misconduct or delinquency."

BECAUSE

We Want to Celebrate our 100th Anniversary

We are holding this our 62nd

NOT hold the Anniversary! Unthinkable! Yet that is exactly what hard-boiled Economists advise. "Under market conditions, this Anniversary will cost you money", they point out.

Last New York Times tabulations show the Ninth Consecutive Week of Advances. Cotton advanced $1 a bale, a cent a pound just last week. For the first time in 12 years, the furniture industry, developed a "sellers' market." That is—there exists more "Demand" than "Supply". These are just "spots" from a pronounced up-swing.

Yet for the next thirty days, Kaufmann's is committed to disregard wholesale increases. We are going to sell for less than we can restock in many instances.

Why hold the Anniversary to our cost? Why!

"Bad business", grumble the economists. "Good business," we answer. We profit most not by the gain of the moment, —but by keeping faith with Pittsburgh. We are going ahead with the Anniversary as usual. The more pronounced our Values, the stronger our hopes for steadily growing with Pittsburgh to the glorious celebration of our 100th Anniversary.

KAUFMANN'S 62nd ANNIVERSARY

'BREAK' FOR HUMBLE TAXPAYER SOUGHT BY ELSIE ROBINSON

'Joneses' Support U.S. While Morgans Pay Nothing

Mr. Franklin Roosevelt, President of the United States, Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. President:

I am just one of the Joneses. Speaking for the tribe.

Hitherto, nobody has heard much, and cared less, about what we Joneses thought. If we'd been capitalists or Communists—if we had had a lot of money or could have raised a lot of Cain—maybe the master minds would have consulted us. But, being just plain, patient plodders, we've had to take what was handed us.

But things do seem looking up! There's Capone, getting his. And other smart boys being investigated. So perhaps our day is coming at last. That's why I'm taking this opportunity, Mr. President, to say what's on my mind . . . AND ASK IF IT ISN'T TIME WE JONESES HAD A BREAK?

As you may know, we've never had very fat pickings. And for the last three years, we've taken the worst beating of our lives. We couldn't wait in bread lines like the poorest. Nor unload our obligations and sell our yachts like the richest. We just had to stand and take it, and history proves we CAN take it. But this Morgan business is the last straw.

Of course, we haven't heard all the story yet. Nor will we understand it when we do. These high finance shinannigans are mostly beyond us. But we do know plain facts—when we see them. And we're plenty smart enough to realize that—

WE'VE BEEN LEFT HOLDING THE BAG AGAIN.

Morgan Fared Well

Here is the mighty financial magnate, who had us all in his grip . . . who was jig-sawing America to suit himself. During these desperate years, while the rest of us were eating, and taking, the cheapest cuts . . . putting another plaster on the house . . . giving up the little car . . . telling the kid he'd have to leave college . . . just how was the might Morgan faring? He was faring swell. He had the first grab and the last say on everything.

And what was Mr. Morgan paying for that privilege and pleasure?

HE WAS PAYING EXACTLY NOTHING.

What—NOTHING?

No—nothing.

Not a darn dime.

All of us little Joneses going near mad trying to meet our taxes and keep this government functioning—

But he should worry! Nor did he.

IN 1931, MR. MORGAN DID NOT PAY ONE CENT OF INCOME TAX . . .

NOR IN 1932 . . .

Nor, perhaps in 1930, though he can't yet remember a trifle like that.

And now, if he goes to jail, it still won't cost Mr. Morgan a cent. For the Joneses, as usual, will have to pay his board n' lodging! Laugh that one off.

No—on second thought—don't be silly. We all know that Mr. Morgan won't go to jail. By the time this is printed, we shall have heard 5,928,476 perfectly good reasons why Mr. Morgan didn't pay any income tax — AND DIDN'T NEED TO.

And indeed, even the stupidest of us Joneses have known "why" all along.

FOR NOBODY HAS NEEDED TO PAY INCOME TAX IN THIS COUNTRY IF HE HAD MONEY ENOUGH TO GET OUT OF IT.

Escape Is 'Legal'

And that does not imply any criminal maneuverings. It merely implies having money enough to buy TAX-EXEMPT BONDS . . . or to use any one of scores of perfectly legal expedients which make it possible for powerful people to greatly reduce or entirely avoid paying taxes.

All of which we Joneses have realized for years. Each one of us is acquainted with rich men and women who have never paid a cent of federal tax. Yet they lived under the protection and profited by the service of a government which we Joneses supported by our compulsory and absolutely unavoidable tax assessments.

But what could we do about it? Not a thing.

For we weren't in the lucky "upper brackets" classes. We were just the obscure, hand-to-mouth workers who held up the brackets . . . and took the beatings.

And it wasn't the rich man who gave us the worst of the beating. IT WAS OUR OWN FEDERAL GOVERNMENT THAT PUT US ON THE SPOT AND KEPT US THERE!

For that government, which we have fondly believed to be a democracy, has, in reality, always been a DISCRIMINATORY GOVERNMENT run for high financiers by high financiers, with the little fellow always holding the bag.

Look at it any way you please, the big fellow always won. He not only got most of his money without sweating for it, and invested it without paying for it, but he also had all the rest of his program fixed up jake.

There were laws for exempting the taxes on his bonds and tricks for eliminating the taxes on his business. Given a smart lawyer, or even a dumb one, the big business man who wanted to dodge the income tax collector, could write off practically everything against "replacement and repairs" . . . including manicures, airplanes, campaign bets, bum oil stock, alimony, rejuvenation treatments and hennaed hussies.

Yes, our federal laws were—AND STILL ARE—certainly sweet for the big fellow. But suppose we Joneses—who have no bonds and no business except our two tired hands and our bewildered brains—suppose we Joneses fall ill? Have to have an operation? Can we charge it off to "repairs and replacements," and deduct it from our income tax?

Just Our Bad Luck

NOT A CHANCE! THAT IS "PURELY PERSONAL EXPENSE" AND OUR OWN PRIVATE BAD LUCK.

But isn't a poor man's HEALTH as truly his "BUSINESS" as the rich man's bank or steel mill?

Indeeed it is.

And shouldn't a "democracy"—if it has to make special laws at all—make them in favor of the common man who earns his own income, and depends entirely on those hand-to-mouth earnings, instead of in favor of the rich man, whose income goes on and whose investments go free, regardless?

It certainly should.

BUT TRY AND TELL THAT TO THE INCOME TAX COLLECTOR!

OR JUST ATTEMPT TO GET THAT NOTION THROUGH CONGRESS . . . WHICH INSISTS UPON INCREASING THE INCOME TAX BURDEN ON US JONESES INSTEAD OF PASSING THE SALES TAX WHICH WOULD INCLUDE THE BIG FELLOW ALSO.

NO—any way you take it, the little fellow pays the bills and takes the beating. And we're thinking plenty today as we read Mr. Morgan's record . . . and remember all those busted banks and mortgaged farms and starving schoool teachers . . . n' other little things like that.

So we're asking you, Mr. President—has the time come at last when things will be evened up?

It certainly looks as if you were making good on that promise to give America a new deal. You're doing things to and for this country that only a few men have ever had the courage to attempt. You're exposing nuisances and parasites that have battened on us since we've started. You're making new laws . . . drawing up new work plans . . . such as the world has never seen.

DO THE JONESES GET A NEW DEAL, TOO, MR. ROOSEVELT?

Mind you, we're not whining. We're glad to do our share, running risks and carrying expenses.

BUT MUST WE GO ON TAKING ALL THE RISKS . . . CARRYING ALL THE EXPENSES . . . HOLDING THE BAG FOREVER?

AREN'T THE JONESES EVER GOING TO GET A BREAK, MR. PRESIDENT?

Can't you say a word for the equalization of taxation?

Can't you ask Congress to end the exactions and extortions and discriminations of income taxation and substitute the simple equitable sales tax.

All we want is an even break, Mr. President—an honest deal.

Respectfully,

ELSIE ROBINSON.

On a Rolling Coast-to-Coaster

Never get on a train without imagining that I detect the odor of peeled oranges . . . That's because in the 1920 days and nights the tenants of the day coaches thrived on them . . . Passing through this village, this town and that city isn't anything new to me . . . Seems as though it were only yesterday . . . Not when the skin that holds my bones wearied and they thought a holiday from New York was more important . . . It seems as though it were yesterday, I mean, when I carried a music case in my left paw instead of a portable typewriter . . . And when every three days or a week meant "having to make good" all over again . . . For some theater manager, whose opinion mattered . . . Those opening matinees! . . . Counting on the mediocre orchestras (of five or maybe six pieces) to play your tempos correctly . . . Counting on the stage crews, the electricians and the spotlight men not to fail you . . . You usually needed "next week" and when things went sour—and the manager turned in an unfavorable report—heaven help you . . . And those audiences! . . . Where they gaped up at you—mouths wide open and eyes colder than a headliner's stare . . . The "go ahead and make me like your act!" attitude . . . And when you had to theft the second bow—thinking you were fooling the managers (janitors in high class clothes) . . . Hmmm—we're due in Chicago soon . . . McVicker's Chicago! . . . How I worried about the dramatic critic on the Chicago Evening American, then . . . Now I work for it.

Don't want to spend a summer in New York again. . . . Guess I'm getting old . . . I can remember when the humidity never bothered me—until three years ago, that is . . . The struggle that goes with gasping for a breeze in the hotels isn't worth the bother . . . Hope the stretch across the desert isn't going to be too tough to take . . . I can still see little Dolly Cliff, when she was a kid—with her tongue thicker than its natural size—as we rode the Mojave in 1915—poor thing . . . And the conductor had to feed her drops of water, a few every hour, thru a fountain-pen filler. . . . The rattlers are now air-conditioned, I know. . . . But that desert air gags you—and the best trick is sleeping or lolling around peeled—with ice packs on your throat and on your wrists. . . . Wonder whatever became of Nellie, her titian-headed sister—my real first crush? . . . Nellie was such a nice girl. . . And so Brit-tish! . . . She felt sorry for me (I had to run away from home and the rear of my pants weren't just there!) and she took me to the Hub in Baltimore, a store there . . . And asked me would I oblige by trying on this suit and that one "as my sizes were her brother's" in Oldham, England. . . . Imagine the thrill next day—when they all were delivered to me. . . Nearly $100 worth of clothing, socks, shoes, ties, shirts etc. . . . I paid it back at $2 a week.

Funny thing how Nellie and I really met. . . Nellie was so proper . . . Always worrying about Dolly . . . In this act (One of those Gus Edwards School-boys and Girls acts) Dolly was the star. . . . Nellie warmed a rear bench and joined in the chorus . . . I was "Ritchie Cross," a tough mugg—the name was coined from two of the current and most popular fighters. . . . There was a pediculous song in the act: "Here Comes My Rover," or something like that . . . And Dolly led that number down near the foots . . . And on the second chorus the girls danced across to the boys as the boys got on their haunches and aped doggies—with their hands dangling near their chests . . . And the gals held leashes—and were supposed to place the dog collars around our throats—gently . . . And Nellie, who must have been in a mood that performance—chucked hers at me and struck me on the nose . . . "Aw, for goodness sake!" I groaned . . . That settled me . . . Nellie, who kept to herself at all times (we hadn't met socially), walked off the stage . . . And threatened that unless I were fired she'd quit and take her sister out of the act . . . And so Roy Mack, the manager (he played the sissy, which he certainly ain't!), fired me—for the "good of the act."

I was so miserable . . . That was in Lowell, Mass. . . . Lowell! July 4th it was——and because my knickerbockers had such spaces in the rear I never went outdoors without wearing a raincoat . . . A raincoat on the sunniest days! . . . After using up all the tears that race from a boy's heart to his throat and then to his orbs—I went to Nellie's dressing room and marked time outside the door—trying to make up a speech of humility . . . And while waiting outside that door—I heard Nellie say to her sister: "I'd give anything for a bar of soap and some washing powder!" . . . And she named the products which I mustn't name here, the business office is so fussy, you know . . . So what did your young hero do? . . . A fast-thinker even then, my dears . . . He raced out to a grocery and bought the clothes-washers, brought them back and handed them to Nellie, who had cooled down by then . . . She thanked me and the next day on the train Nellie sat next to me of her own volition (free will to you!) . . . "You know Walter," Nellie began, "you're a nice boy. You have nice features, too. And you'd make a nicer appearance if you did something about those pimples" . . . I was so embarrassed . . . Every night for years after that—I decorated my kisser with salves because Nellie liked me a little . . But it didn't help them . . . Four years later when Nellie and Dolly sailed for London I ached all over . . . She promised to write every day . . . But something happened, I guess.

Oh, well . . . I'll never forget the time she dressed me up—and let me pay it back in tiny sums every week . . . Wonder where she is now? And if things are okay with her? . . . And if she knows about me? . . . I can remember, too, when she once said (that must have been in 1916 or 17), "You will go far some day, Walter. You're a sticker" . . . I wish I knew where she was now . . . I'd send her a nice present—or something . . . What beautiful hair she had! I heard that Nellie was back in America a few years ago . . . But she never even phoned me or anything . . . And if she is married, which she probably isn't (so devoted was she to her mother), her husband needn't get himself worked up into any lather . . . I can't help reminiscing when I'm on a train passing through places where Nellie and I laughed so much, and were so young . . . I'm 36 now . . . Nellie was 3 years older when I was 17 . . . Never dreaming that in decades to follow—so much would happen . . . To lift me to the clouds—and leaden me, too.

And now here I am again . . . Riding a coast-bound Iron Horse . . . To June and the exact carbon copy whose name is Walda . . . Without them—what? . . . They love me so . . . "And even more!" always adds Walda . . . Who has been counting the hours . . . Baking there in the sun . . . And playing in the open where children should play . . . And not in hotel corridors . . . She rarely would listen to me when I rode the skies via the microphone . . . Because, it appears, she couldn't stand the ache of hearing me and not seeing me . . . Once or twice they tried to make her stay in the room and listen . . . But the corners of her pretty little mouth would droop and she would choke suppressing the tears . . . "Why, then," a woman recently queried, "do you have them so far away from you for so long" . . . But she wouldn't understand . . . She wouldn't understand how frightened a man and a woman can be—in New York . . . Where the Sun is the name of a newspaper. Where the trees are only in parks or a speakeasy backyards—and where one frail flower—didn't stand a chance.

Lupe Velez, Ramon Novarro As Co-Stars Proposed By Director

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, June 2.—Here's news that ought to make Ramon Novarro sit up and take notice. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is planning to put Lupe Velez opposite him in "Laughing Boy."

The possibilities of the combination are self-evident. Both these players come from Mexico, but it is practically their one similarity. Where Lupe is vociferous and bold, Ramon is soft-spoken and poetic.

Miss Velez

Team them in a love story and—well, it ought not to be dull.

In picture-making, of course, there's always the chance of a slip-up. Director W. S. Van Dyke wants to have Lupe in the role, and she will be back here in time for the film. It only remains to keep other directors from putting in a louder bid.

* * *

Unless her doctor changed his mind, Jobyna Ralston is at home today, giving her young son a first glimpse of his future home. Next month, Dixie Lee has a reservation on the same hospital room. Sue Carol had the room when her baby was born.

* * *

With every studio calling for him, Leslie Howard was able to drive a shrewd bargain with Warners. Report says he gets $50,000 for the first picture, with $15,000 tacked on for each succeeding role. The English actor is becoming one of Hollywood's prime polo enthusiasts. Last Sunday, playing No. 1 man on the Hollywood Cats, he scored three goals and was an important factor in the defeat of Walt Disney's four. Charles Farrell also made a goal. These Sunday matches always draw a film crowd.

The Kid

WHENEVER I read a newspaper tale about a young boy getting a long sentence for some crime or other, I am reminded of the story of The Kid. There's something dangerously wrong with a system that puts a child into jail and makes him grow up with hardened criminals, regardless of the offense.

Consider that Murch boy over on Long Island, for example. A week or two ago, he was sentenced to 20 years in jail for killing another youth. Barely 16 years of age, he will be about 31, allowing him the proper time off, when he comes out of the penitentiary. And what sort of citizen will Mr. Murch be at that time? I hesitate to think about it, and I leave the answer to you.

All right then, people say to me, give us your solution to the problem. What would you have us do; pat him on the back and set him free? Because he is young, does that lessen the crime?

I cannot answer these questions because I realize that they are just. I know that a child must be punished for a crime and I would be the last one to argue against it. But I firmly believe that our methods of punishing such children are a national disgrace.

As I said in my first paragraph, such cases as the Murch affair always bring back to my mind the story of The Kid.

The Kid was what most of us would term a good boy. He had a diffident manner, and there wasn't anything in the world that he wouldn't do for his mother. He loved his mother more than life itself, and his every thought was for her.

You'd probably say that such a boy couldn't go wrong. But he did. Not wrong in the sense that he became a criminal, or that he left his mother for some fat burlesque queen. No, nothing like that. The Kid went wrong precisely because he was a good boy. Because he always did as his mother told him.

He was just 17 at the time.

His mother needed money. She wanted The Kid to go through high school. College, she knew, would be impossible—but the completion of high school would at least give him a good start in life. That took money.

Then, too, there were the living expenses to think of. Since The Kid's father died she had made a brave but losing struggle of it. Minding babies and washing clothes helped a little—but not enough.

So she became what, in that state at that time, was a very terrible thing. She became a bootlegger.

Perhaps you'll condemn her for it, because many people did. And perhaps your judgment will tell you that if The Kid was such a good boy, he would have renounced an education in favor of a job.

He did. But his mother could not see it that way.

"Kid," she told him, "you can work after school if you feel that way. But if you want to make me happy, you'll finish high school."

So The Kid continued his schooling and worked in the afternoons. Jobs were scarce, so he worked for his mother. He would come home from school, fling his books on the kitchen table and watch her as she poured the watery-looking fluid into bottles. Then she'd place the bottles in paper bags; bags with names written on the sides.

And the boy would deliver them. That was his job. This one to Mr. Birdwell; that one to Mrs. Austin. Collect for this one; tell the other man it would be on his bill.

It was like that for six months. Then came the break. The Kid was stopped by a man. A big man. What did The Kid have in those bags? The Kid tried to hurry by. The man stuck his first in The Kid's face and the boy hit the sidewalk, bleeding from the mouth. Two of the bottles broke. The third one didn't.

Strange, but they didn't get anything on the mother. The Kid, however, they had dead to rights. The judge, a phony hypocrite, who had been a souse for years, made a long and solemn speech about upholding the Constitution of the United States and how it was his bounden duty to send this dangerous youth to jail.

Which he did. For one whole year....

Somehow, the time wore on and the year drew to a close. The Kid had been stationed on the prison coal chute and it was his job on occasion to guide the chute.

One afternoon, with the end of The Kid's term only 12 days off, he was strolling in the yard when another convict stepped beside him.

"Listen, Kid," he muttered. "You're gonna do some of the boys around here a little favor tomorrow. At 10 o'clock you'll see a package come down the chute with the coal. You just take it and drop it in the left-hand corner of bin two. Understand, Kid?"

The Kid choked. He understood.

"But I can't do that," he cried. "If I—"

"You'll do it," interrupted the other man harshly, "or you'll never walk out of here 12 days from now. And if you do walk out, you won't get much further than the gate.

"That package goes in that bin, doesn't it, Kid?"

The Kid wet his lips nervously. His voice was strangely husky.

"Sure," he replied. "Sure it does." . . .

On the following morning the package—containing revolvers and files—went into the left-hand corner of bin two. And the Kid, who is now much older than he looks, is serving 15 years for aiding a jail break...

BARRYMORE IS STAR ON FULTON'S SCREEN

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

An inspirational story devoid of any hysterical elements or other overfluent emotional exhibitions is depicted on the Fulton screen in "Looking Forward," which has Lionel Barrymore and Lewis Stone in the leading roles. The title, by permission, is taken from a book by President Roosevelt, but the story is an adaptation of an English stage play, "Service."

Service is a family name that adorns a great mercantile establishment, in existence more than 100 years, that has descended to the present day member of the family played by Lewis Stone. Barrymore, as a humble clerk, Benton, has been in its employ more than 40 years. Hard times hit it and retrenchment is necessary. Help is reduced and Benton is among those dismissed. But disaster still impends, and bankruptcy or a sell-out to a low-class rival are presented as alternatives. To a Service the latter seems the greater tragedy, as the ideals of the store always have been high.

That is the basic situation out of which develops the punch of the story. It is illustrated in the manner in which the members of families and Service and of Benton face it. The latte. are immediately loyal. The young Services appear not to be, but when their father decides to sell, in order to save something for them, their readiness to fight, and the example of Benton, swing him to the decision that it will be better to carry on.

It is quite refreshing to see the younger generation pictured in some other light than the jazz-mad conception of the screen, and to see it done without mock heroics or mushy sentimentality. The story is direct and appealing, and the acting is convincingly sincere. It has some comedy and romance, but neither are stressed.

Phillips Holmes, Elizabeth Allan and Benita Hume are prominent in the cast.

New Future Home Called Good Samaritan and Inn by Dr. Clopper

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

If the board of directors of the New Future Home ever had the shadow of a doubt as to the importance of its work, that shadow must have been dispelled yesterday after hearing all the encomiums that were paid by the speakers at the semi-annual luncheon meeting in the Congress of Clubs.

For instance, Dr. E. N. Clopper, who was the honor guest, said the Home is "not only the Good Samaritan, but the Inn where the unfortunate traveler on the road to Jericho may find help."

Dr. Clopper, who is leaving Pittsburgh to become professor of sociology at the University of Cincinnati, talked chiefly of the problem of homeless women and girls, which, he says, is particulary difficult in Pittsburgh because the city does not offer them much chance for economic adjustment. Pittsburgh had 1,542 homeless women and girls in 1933, and the rate has not declined so far this year, Dr. Clopper said.

Other speakers included Mrs. D. Edwin Miller, head of women's work in the Salvation Army; Dr. A. M. Snyder, of the Pennsylvania Training School at Morganza; W. F. H. Wentzel, of the Humane Society; Mrs. T. M. Stahlman, past president of the Congress of Clubs, and Edwin Winter, of Boggs & Buhl, which firm gives truck service to the home.

Music was furnished by two sisters, Miss Sarah and Miss Tirzah Williamson, of Grove City, who sang solos and duets and gave piano solos, also.

Mrs. Jesse D. Bowers, president of the board, welcomed the 118 guests who represented more than 20 welfare organizations.

New President Takes Office At Congress

Another president sits at the executive desk in the Congress of Clubs today, Mrs. Oliver J. Haller having accepted the gavel from Mrs. T. M. Stahlman at a breakfast in the clubhouse yesterday morning.

While breakfast was being served each retiring director introduced a new director and each outgoing officer presented her successor. Mrs. Sherman Massingham, the new second vice president, was chairman in charge, and presented Mrs. Stahlman.

The table was beautifully decorated with garden roses.

Thurston and Winchester Commencement Next Week

Girls in Pittsburghs' private schools are engrossed just now in commencement plans. Thurston School has set Wednesday as commencement day, and Winchester, Friday, June 9.

Those who will receive diplomas Wednesday are Elizabeth Bevan, Frances Clark, Mary Louise Beyer, Sarah Lee Maits, Mary Louise Overend and Ann Mahaffey.

Miss Bevan, Miss Beyer, Miss Clark and Miss Mahaffey will enter Pennsylvania College for Women in the fall, with Miss Clark going later to Yale; Miss Maits will enroll at Maryland College and Miss Overend and Miss Mahaffey at the Misses' Semple School in New York.

After the commencement, the class members will be guests of honor at the Junior Prom at the Pittsburgh Country Club. Completing plans for the dance are Louise McCalmont, Janet Shaw, Evelyn Davis, Frances Graham, Bette Abbott and Clara Clark.

Winchester School will have a musicale tonight at the school, at which the choral chorus, directed by Miss Anne Griffiths, will sing. Jean Brideson, child-violinist, will play and Miss Mary Seaner will sing.

This afternoon at 4 o'clock the lower school will present a program of French plays.

Scouts to Stage Country Fair Tomorrow

It sounds like a big day for East District Girl Scouts as one hears plans for the Eighteenth Century English Country Fair that's to be held tomorrow in Frick Park. The fair is taking the place of the annual district Court of Awards.

A section of the park will be decorated by Troop 146, of Edgewood, to represent an entrance to "London Towne." A market place will be erected by Troop 69 and the East McKeesport Scouts, and there handcraft and nature work will be exhibited.

There's also to be a wishing well where lemonade will be served by the girls of Troop 154.

CLOTHES FOR THE COMMUTER SMART FOR DAY AND EVENING

GOING UP to town for the day may be something that happens to you three times during the summer, when you reluctantly desert the beach, or it may roll round as regularly as breakfast-time. Whichever way it arrives, it takes a clear head and a firm purpose to deal with it. There's an early morning train to be caught. There's the ride on that, with cinders silting in through the window, however dewy the day. There are soggy streets to be tramped over. There's a furnace sun.

* * *

BY THE time your temper is near the breaking point, you regale yourself with lunch on a cool roof, surrounded by women who have dressed in their newest and freshest not over an hour before. There's the friend you ring up who says: "Why in heaven's name didn't you tell me you were coming to town, because I've got seats for a marvelous show tonight and you must stay for dinner and go to it."

* * *

IF YOU haven't taken thought in planning what you'll wear, you'll be such a shambles by this time that you'll have to give the whole thing up. If you've been one of the wise ones, you'll be fresh as a daisy and rarin' to go.

* * *

THE RULES of any commuting costume are: It mustn't muss, it mustn't be a magnet for cinders and dirt, it must be sheer and cool, it must look neat and sufficiently festive so it will do for anything that turns up during the day. If you make a good job of it, you'll be as spandy homeward bound on the 5:19 or the midnight as when you pulled up to the station half a minute before the train pulled out in the morning. Humbly offered, these suggestions may prove useful. They've been tried out in principle by ardent commuters and they are offered this year in styles still more amusing than those of other seasons.

Love Must Be Part of Life To Be Lasting

Can love stop—just like that?

Can we adore each other madly one month, yet turn icy cool the next?

Here's a little girl who'd like to know. And many another older girl would like to know, also.

A silly letter? No. Childish words, perhaps; but they echo the saddest human tragedy.

Dear Elsie:

You have helped so many others that I am coming to you with my trouble. I hope you can help me, because I feel so broken and discouraged that I just don't know how to go on.

I am 20, and for the last year and a half I have been going with a young man of 24. For the last year we haven't either of us gone with anyone else, and evenings, holidays and Sundays he always came over.

I used to tell him I didn't think we should see so much of each other, but he couldn't seem to see enough of me. He swore that he loved me deeply—that I was the only girl for him. We often talked of the future, and a little home we would have some day. I dreamed of when that time would come. I was so happy!

And then, two weeks ago, out of a clear sky he told me he didn't love me any more.

He insisted that it wasn't another girl—that he had just come to the conclusion that he didn't love me, and that he didn't think he would ever love anyone else, either—that he didn't think he would ever marry.

STILL WANTS HIM

My heart is simply breaking. I loved and do love him deeply. I think that I can never love anyone else. I am so miserable that I can't eat or sleep. My whole life is simply in ruins.

I feel that I can never trust a man again, no matter what he says, for I was so sure that Tom loved me as I loved him. He gave me every reason to think so. He was so attentive, so thoughtful—and then to just destroy all my dreams like that!

Maybe I am crazy to still want him, but I do. I think of him every minute. When I doze off I dream of him. I can't get him out of my mind.

Why has this dreadful thing happened to me? Can it be really possible that his love could stop—just like that?

And what will I do? I know I can never stop loving him. Please help me; I am so miserable. CARRIE.

Can love stop—just like that?

Yes, child, it can — if it doesn't march hand in hand with our lives. What do I mean by that? This: If love is just a romantic adventure—if it's a period of thrill and ecstasy and doesn't root itself in our natures and regular every-day program—then love won't last. Unless love is part of life, part of everything that we call life, then love won't last.

SOMETHING LACKING

But can we make love part of of life? No; not unless we are really fitted by birth and inclination to be partners. And plainly, you and the boy weren't.

You didn't want to fail him. He didn't want to fail you. But there was something lacking in each of you that the other needed. You would have discovered that sooner or later, too. He discovered it first—and he was brave to tell you.

And now you must take it as bravely. Yes, I know you want him terribly. But he wouldn't be use to you, even if you could get him, if his heart remains a stranger. So face that fact straight, little girl, and get going again.

I know you think life's all over now—but it isn't. This is just one of those things which happen to all of us, and if you'll take it gamely it won't be a loss. Instead, it will make you wiser—more tender and tolerant—and a finer sweetheart for the right man when he comes your way.

Fay King Asks Sympathy for the Big Little Sorrows of Youth

By FAY KING

When we are very young everything is so important to us. Trifles seem like tragedies.

We think seriously of dying when we are scolded or slighted. Life isn't worth living when we are hurt to the heart by some thoughtless word or deed.

But fortunately small pleasures lift us to the seventh heaven of delight, as quickly as small disappointments send us down into dungeons of despair. Thus we survive.

But elders have long forgotten these terrific heartaches of youth. They remember now only the comic angles.

And so they laugh at the wrong time. They seem unsympathetic and misunderstanding.

Elders must remember that these same trifles were not comic to them when they were young. That a broken promise was a whole world crashing around one!

Heart of a Wife -:- Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Is Forced to Obey Nick's Command

Even before Marion's choked little scream for aid, I was upon my knees beside Ronald, tearing open his collar, and realizing that she had spoken truly when she had said that he was hurt and bleeding. Blood was dripping steadily from a wound in the upper part of his chest. But even as I began to tear at the boy's shirt in a frantic attempt to get something to stanch that flow of blood, I was lifted bodily from the ground, and realized that I was closely held in Nick's hateful arms.

He held me thus but for a fraction of a second, however. Then he put me down as casually as he had lifted me.

"Just the size I like," he commented, with something in his voice that sent my mental thermometer toward zero. "But just now, we've got something else on hand. I'll tend to this boy, Baby. That bird at the end of this rope managed to get a knife free just before I got there, and slipped the end of it between the boy friend's ribs."

"He ain't going to die," Nick said in a milder tone an instant later, and I heard the sound of tearing cloth beneath his strong fingers. "He even ain't very bad off. He'll come round in a minute or two."

ASKED TO TIE OWEN

His tone held the calm assurance of a man accustomed to look upon death and wounds. But his next words were a crisp command.

"Baby, you take that rope I dropped, and tie that Owen bird up tighter. You'll find a lot of loose slack fastened just below where I had hold of it. I didn't have time to do any more than hitch him under the shoulders, so I could drag him without his face pushing in the ground. But you tie his legs and arms up good and tight. And—do you suppose you could put a little silencer in his mouth?"

"You mean, could I gag him?" I asked tremulously.

"You've said it."

"No, I'd only make a botch of it," I returned with decision.

"You probably said a mouthful," he returned good-humoredly. "All right. By the time you get him ready for roasting, I'll be through here and can tie up his mouthpiece. But hurry!"

I do not count myself a coward, but I suffered actual physical terror as I untied the slack rope and bent over the unconscious figure of Charles Owen.

RONALD REVIVED

I experienced no trouble with him, however; he was plainly unconscious, and when I had finished binding him, I turned him over on his back again, and stooping over him, gave one appraising, and—I am afraid—jubilant look at the punishment Ronald's fists had inflicted upon him. Then I crossed to where Nick was binding up Ronald's shoulder, to find that the job was finished, and Ronald, revived to consciousness, though pitifully weak, was resting with his head in Marion's lap. I did not protest her care of him, though I knew how spent she must be from her terrible experience, but I moved quickly to a spot directly behind her and sat down, drawing her back against my shoulder so that she might have the easiest possible position.

"Well, Baby!" Nick's low voice was jovial again. "Is the Big Noise alive yet? And have you got him tied up so he can't do anybody any dirt when he comes to?"

"He is alive yet, but not conscious," I replied. "And I think I have tied him securely."

"I'll just make sure of that." He moved to Owen's side and tested the knots. Then he came back to me.

"We'll just set the little girl friend with her back to a tree," he said. "She'll be just as comfortable, and then, Baby, you're coming along with me. They'll all be safe here till somebody comes and finds 'em. And it's my turn, now."

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Eat Foods That Regenerate the Blood

Frequently I am asked about the value of certain foods as blood builders. If one is run down or giving other evidence of anemia, it is important to choose wisely in the eating.

Dr. Copeland

With a fickle and unresponsive appetite, the quantity of food taken is small. This makes it important to take exactly the right things.

One of the great authorities said this: "Food is the most important thing in blood regeneration. A properly arranged dietary greatly outweighs any other factor in the treatment of anemia."

I fully indorse this statement. If we could get the human family to eat as it should, disease would be far less prevalent than it is at present. The expectation of life would be increased materially.

In the building of blood two mineral elements are of chief importance. They are iron and copper. The latter is required in very minute quantities. There must be generous supplies of iron.

Of course there are medicines, medicinal preparations, that contain iron. But it is the organic iron, the iron found in animal and flesh food, that is by far the more important.

What we commonly call the "giblets" of animals are peculiarly rich in iron. On this account kidney and liver are extremely valuable blood building foods. It makes little difference what particular animal is called upon for its contribution—every species is good.

The vegetables are not conspicuous for their iron content. Spinach, asparagus and what we call the "greens," have blood building properties.

It is interesting to know that the other vegetables and the grains, valuable as they are in the diet for other reasons, carry no iron. Even milk, butter and cheese, essential foods, are not helpful in building blood.

We fare better when we come to the fruits. Most of them are good blood builders. This is particularly true of apricotes, peaches and prunes.

For enriching the blood these fruits need not be in their fresh form. They are just as efficient when dried or canned.

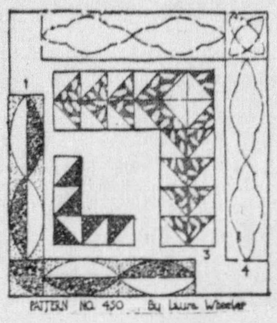
QUILT BORDERS



In olden times, the quilt-maker was not alone satisfied to make a beautiful quilt of joined blocks. She completed her handiwork and enhanced the beauty of her quilt by adding a fitting frame, a patchwork or quilted border. This pattern offers a variety of old-time borders that harmonize with popular old quilt patterns. Border No. 1 is an appropriate finish for such favorites as Double Wedding Ring, Melon Patch, Dutch Windmill and other patterns in which rounded patches predominate. Border No. 2 and Border No. 3, which is a variation of No. 2, harmonize with such patterns as Friendship Knot, Basket patterns, Star designs, Pine Tree, Flyfoot and other patterns which contain triangular patches as an outstanding part of the design. Border No. 4 is a quilting design, and is effective when used on a plain or patchwork border. It is so designed that it can be done by machine or by hand. All the borders have a corner block to complete them. The pattern includes the pattern pieces, and the guide for arranging the patches as well as a variety of illustrations showing each border in different arrangements that result in radically different effects.

Send 10c for this pattern to the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York City.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

In a Car

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—When a lady and gentleman are standing together on a street car, is it proper for the lady to hold a strap or to the gentleman's arm?

2—When a lady and gentleman are in church together, should the lady contribute to the collection or does the gentleman's contribution suffice for them both?

3—When a gentleman is a guest at a dinner where should he be seated? G.

1—It is better, if she can, for her to play the role of clinging vine to her own strap.

2—And this, too, calls for independence. This contribution stands for her personal generosity, and it is so personal—or should be—that no one else can, or should be allowed to make it for her. If anyone makes this contribution for us, it is still the other person's contribution, not ours. In such contributions we cannot shift the spiritual or financial responsibility.

3—The gentleman, if he is the only male guest, or if he is to be given the honor place, should be assigned the place on the right of the hostess.

The Lady's Privilege

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it proper for a young lady to extend her hand when she is being introduced to a young man, or should she wait until the young man extends his? D.

It is the young lady's privilege of extending her hand if she wishes to shake hands with the young man who is being introduced to her. The young man waits for her to do this, and should not extend his hand first.

But of course it is not necesary for her to shake hands when a man is being introduced to her. It is correct, if she wishes, but it is not necessary, and, unless there is some special welcoming of the introduction, usually the woman bows and says, "how do you do?" without shaking hands.

The Gentleman Rises

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

In a cabaret, is it proper for a man to rise from his chair when a lady joins his table? READER.

In a cabaret or anywhere else it is proper for a gentleman to rise when a lady joins his party.

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

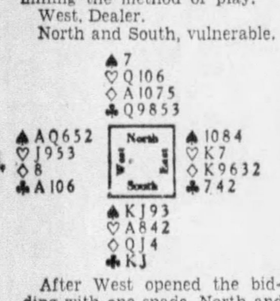
By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

A Series of Forced Leads

Speculative Doubles at Contract Bridge are bad as a general rule. They are unwise, first, because there is no particular point in taking the chance of doubling the point score of an opponent on a doubtful hand and, second, because they often furnish the key to the correct play of a hand that otherwise might go down in defeat. Generally speaking, it is the course of wisdom to adhere closely to the rule governing Penalty Doubles—namely, that they should not be made unless there is a definite expectation of the defeat of a contract by 2 tricks. The hand below is an example of a speculative Double which aided the Declarer in determining the method of play.

West, Dealer.

North and South, vulnerable.



After West opened the bidding with one spade, North and South finally reached the contract of three notrump, which West doubled.

West's Opening lead was the fourth-best spade, upon which East played the Ten, South winning the trick with the Knave. South then immediately led the King of clubs, which West refused to win, and continued the suit, overtaking the Knave with the Queen in Dummy when on the second lead of clubs West dropped the Ten. The club suit was then led again, and West was put in the lead, South discarding a diamond. At this point West decided that he would not concede South another trick in spades, so he led his diamond. South, however, now thought he could see the way to make his contract. West was marked with length in spades through his bidding. He also had held three clubs. It was entirely possible that South could so play the cards as to prevent East from obtaining the lead. Therefore, on the diamond he went up with the Ace, disdaining the finesse, and proceeded to cash his remaining club tricks, discarding one heart and one diamond. With the clubs exhausted, the Queen of hearts was now led from Dummy, East covering with the King, and South going up with the Ace. Then South returned a heart, which West won with the Knave. West's hand, however, was now void of everything but spades, and all hope of putting East in for a lead to West's spade stoppers must therefore be abandoned.

In consequence of South's appreciation of the situation, which required accurate card reading, the Declarer made four clubs, two hearts, one diamond and two spades, fulfilling the contract.

It should be said that the diamond play was based on the fact that East had taken out West's Opening spade bid with a bid of two diamonds, which marked him with a minimum holding of five cards in that suit, and in all probability the heart King as well. The play was based upon these assumptions, and they were found to have a firm foundation in fact.

Today's Question

Your partner has opened the bidding with two hearts. What do you respond, holding

♠ K 8 6 5 ♡ Q 10 6 3 ◇ Q 5 4 2 ♣ 9

Answer: Four hearts. Your hand contains 1 honor-trick outside the trump suit and a singleton.

VETERANS URGE ENACTMENT OF SALES TAX

Cite Exemption of Morgans, Slash For Wounded

Had a sales tax been in existence it would probably not have been necessary for the federal government to cut $460,000,000 out of soldiers' pensions, leaders among veterans' organizations here declare.

All expressed indignation over the disclosures in Washington that J. P. Morgan and associates have not paid income tax for three years.

Many cases of injustice in the reduction of compensation to men with battle wounds are cited by the veterans.

Many favor the introduction of a sales tax and the elimination or drastic reform of the income tax law.

SERVICE MEN'S VIEWS

Opinions of some of the service men follow:

Robert G. Woodside, County Controller and Past Commander-in-Chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars:

"The need for reform in the income tax law is one thing this Congressional investigation has brought out. As to the sales tax, any form of taxation that is easy to pay is, to my mind, an ideal form. The sales tax has operated successfully in Canada."

LEGION LEADER

Charles G. Lane, attorney, past county commander, American Legion, and present chairman of the Legion's State Foreign Relations and World Peace Committee:

"I favor a sales tax as the most equitable and best distributed. The government would not have had to make a $460,000,000 reduction in veterans' pensions, if we had had the sales tax for the past two years."

Attorney John B. Nicklas, former county commander, American Legion, and present Thirty-sixth District commander:

"I think the veterans would favor the sales tax. Thoughtful men will favor a tax placed at the source of production. The sales tax is a much more equitable means of taxation than the present income tax, provided it is placed on the proper articles —luxuries and the like—and not on the necessities of life."

TAX ON LUXURIES

C. R. Haley, National Council member, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and Robert K. Cochrane, Jr., secretary of the Builders' Exchange and county commander of the American Legion, also voiced similar sentiments.

'Nudists' Rush To Lose Shirts In Market Again

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

This glorious old forty-eight ring circus has got us dizzier than a beetle on a gyroscope.

Look what happened this week. Down in Washington we hear the rustle of sacred loose-leaf ledgers.

Sherwood showed up in Jersey. After dodging Seabury barbecue and missing three visits to his dentist.

The boys who lost their shirts in Wall Street are back again to start another financial nudist colony.

New York state is closing twenty thousand beer flats. An Empire State beer drop isn't legal unless it seats twenty people, excluding friends and relatives.

They won't find our name on any Morgan list until they get down to the one that's written in lemon juice. When Pecora holds that paper over a hot stove we will join the boys who elbow window washers out of the way.

All the diplomats are in Geneva putting in sealed bids for the next war. Congress will adjourn next week and the Senators will go home, where a man has got his choice.

Fighting in Court

MARGARET C. LEYDA

Mrs. Leyda, the "missus" in the nightly radioed "Behind the Kitchen Door" over WWSW, pictured at court today as she opposed the habeas corpus action her husband, Edgar J. Leyda, Monongahela, brought for possession of their son, 16. Each is suing the other for divorce. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

RADIO ACTRESS TAKES STAND

A radio entertainer and her husband today opened a divorce battle, a chief object of which appeared to be possession of their 16-year-old son.

Both Mrs. Margaret C. Leyda, known for her radio skit "Behind the Kitchen Door," and her husband, Edgar J. Leyda, Monongahela businessman, seek divorce. Her suit was filed first.

Judge George V. Moore postponed a habeas corpus hearing, asked by the husband in seeking custody of the son, pending outcome of the divorce case. The lad accompanied his mother to court.

Mrs. Leyda testified that she, a minister's daughter, had been shocked by her husband's excessive drinking. She said he had fits of temper, cursed her, once threw a salt shaker because the salt wouldn't "shake."

Her husband charges desertion.

Mrs. Leyda was represented by Attorney Martin A. Flanagan and Leyda by Attorney Vernon Hazzard.

COAL MEN FORM CO-OPERATIVE GROUP HERE

Operators to Adopt Code Approved by Roosevelt

Forty-seven coal operators in Western Pennsylvania have definitely launched a voluntary association in compliance with the national industrial recovery act. Nineteen additional concerns have reserved the right to enter the association. This development grew out of the first regular meeting of the Coal Producers' Association of Western Pennsylvania in William Penn Hotel yesterday.

AGREE TO ADOPT CODE

They agree to adopt and observe a code of fair practices to be approved by the President and to work for the following objectives:

Improvement of welfare conditions and living standards among coal workers and maintenance of satisfactory relations between capital and labor.

Promotion of efficiency and safety in the mining of coal.

Establishment of uniform cost accounting methods.

Conservation of coal as a natural resource and the development of new uses for coal and the extension of available markets.

The key to the proposed plan is the election of a commissioner who will be empowered to examine books and records of member companies and to supervise the relationship between labor and employers.

PROPOSE COMMITTEE

The interest of the operators respecting freight rates also will be furthered by the association under its provisions.

Pending a second meeting of the members and prospective members, to be held next week, following a conference in Washington on the proposed industrial control bill, a committee will be appointed to revise certain provisions of the articles of association.

HEAD OF COUNTY POOL NAMED

C. E. Forrest, dropped from the county payroll in March, was ordered re-employed today to take charge of the South Park swimming pool, scheduled to open tomorrow. Forrest, a former assistant athletic director, will be paid $175 a month instead of the $225 he received last year.

C. C. McGovern, chairman of the commissioners, told Park Director A. M. Marion to see that William Haddock, the athletic director, be assigned to staging athletic events instead of working as a clerk as he has been doing recently. Marion said he needed someone in the office, but would see that Haddock was given work in the park.

Potter Re-Elected To Head Title Group

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 2.—(AP.)—John E. Potter, president of the Potter Title and Trust Company of Pittsburgh, was re-elected president of the Pennsylvania Title Association at the twelfth annual convention today. It is his thirteenth year as head of the organization.

Business recovery is slowly but surely on the way, Potter declared at the opening session.

FOSTER FATHER HELD IN CHILD ABUSE PROBE

Lawyers Face Charges Of 'Fixing' Case Out of Court

Acting on information received from county investigators checking the homes of foster parents caring for Juvenile Court wards, County Detectives Michael Ford and L. A. Kline arrested and committed to jail George Seibert, 45, of Brownsville road, Baldwin Township, charging him with mistreating his 14-year-old foster son.

This is the first arrest brought about by the District Attorney's office as a result of numerous reports of cruelty and mistreatment of county wards made by three women investigators appointed by the County Court last November.

Immediately after detectives arrested Seibert, they began checking the case to determine whether action should be taken against two attorneys who settled the charge against Seibert out of court, although the charge previously brought against Seibert was of such a serious nature that it would only be settled by court trial.

Leo A. Riordan, chief county investigator, yesterday turned over to the county detectives the information gained by him into the investigation into the Seibert case. Seibert, according to detectives, was foster father for several children, including a 14-year-old boy, his 15-year-old sister and a 6-year-old brother. Seibert is said to have mistreated the older boy and to have been guilty of a serious charge.

Information was also turned over to detectives stating that the foster daughter had been subject to insults and embraces while in the home and that the foster children had been compelled to sell beer and wine to patrons visiting the Seibert home.

SQUIRES, AIDES FACE COURT

Justices of the Peace James J. Westwood, of McKees Rocks, and Tony Savatt, of Stowe Township, and three constables attached to their offices, yesterday before Alderman Thomas J. Flanigan waived hearings for court trial, on charges of misdemeanor in office, conspiracy to cheat and false pretense.

The constables held are William Duffy, of Savatt's office, and Timothy Drezler and William Meissner, of Westwood's office. They were all released on $2,500 each for court trial. County Detective Davis Drexler, who made an audit of the justices' records, made the charges.

SCHOOL WASTE HERE CHARGED

Charging extravagance by the Pittsburgh Board of Education at a meeting of the Allegheny County Real Estate Owners' and Taxpayers' League in the Carnegie Library, Hazelwood, last night, I. Leonard Aronson, president of the league, declared every cent spent by the board will be watched by his organization. He said:

"We believe in education so far as we can pay for it."

The property owners of Allegheny County are not well organized and therefore are not capable of voting into office the proper officials, he said.

Shun Stenography Role to Enter Profession

There aren't very many women dentists in the world, but their number will be increased by three after Pitt commencement exercises June 6.

Maria Mercado, of Ponce, Porto Rico; Martha Torok, of Renovo, Pa., and Stephanie Mihalich, of Duquesne, will graduate from the Pitt dental school this year.

Besides their interest in the profession, one of the biggest reasons why they decided to study dentistry, the girls say, was the hope that they would be able to earn independent livelihoods and escape the routine of stenography or other employment.

Their grades, instructors say, have been excellent. Each girl hopes soon to open an office of her own. Miss Mercado, after a year's work in New York, will probably return to Porto Rico.

EXPLAINS FUND DUES INCREASE

A recent increase in dues of the City Employes' Relief Fund was made necessary by the loss of members and because of the advanced age of many of those now participating in its benefits, according to C. S. Brown, president.

Each member has in the past paid $1.50 per month. The rates now in force range from 60 cents a month for members under 40 to more than $22 a month for a member of 95. Relatives of deceased members receive $600 from the fund's insurance company.

Templeton Smith, member of the general committee and president of the Allegheny County League of Women Voters, and Harry Bastow, league secretary and president of the Allied Boards of Trade. The Thirty-first Ward League president, Edward Hendrickson, will preside.

The committee in charge of the meeting is composed of officers of the Civic and Welfare League. They are: Arthur Shellat, vice president; Dave March, secretary; J. M. Brady, treasurer; M. O. Passavant, chairman of the membership committee; Lee Kuenzig, chairman of the entertainment committee, and Lee H. Thomas, chairman of the publicity committee.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., June 2.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

"Farm prices have advanced 17 per cent in the last month." Now that's better news than a speech on "Good Relations" by Mussolini and Hitler combined.

Will Rogers

Our new Ambassador to England got so elated over the Prince of Wales introducing him that he turned over America to England to be used as they saw fit. It takes a strong man to remember what country he is representing when the wine and the flattery start flowing.

If the Republicans ever decide to enter another presidential candidate they better hire this little Pecora to run for 'em. He is the best bet I see right now.

Yours, WILL.

POWER OUTPUT, TONNAGE GAIN

Railroad car loadings and industrial power consumption — weathervanes of the business winds—today leaped to new highs for the past two years in the Pittsburgh district.

West Penn Power Company's electrical output to factories for the week ending May 27 was 23.3 per cent above the corresponding week of last year.

Car loadings in the Central Region of the Pennsylvania Railroad for May were 14.9 per cent ahead of the same month a year ago.

The Solazo Construction Company, of Pittsburgh, has been awarded a contract at $35,013 for the grading and drainage of Route 322 in Mercer and Crawford counties.

Industrial employment, payrolls and operating time in the Pennsylvania district all have shown increases in April and the early part of May, according to the business review issued today by the Philadelphia Federal Reserve Bank.

6 HURT AS AUTO OVERTURNS

Six persons were injured, one seriously, when an automobile overturned several times in Bigelow boulevard after the brakes locked.

Miss Marion Miller, 19, of 6300 Shakespeare street, seriously injured, was in Mercy Hospital suffering a probable fracture of the skull.

The others injured were Fred Manno, 19, of 6354 Marchand street; Blanche Mawley, 19, of 6442 Aurelia street; Betty Andrews, 19, 6342 Marchand street; John Donahoe, 20, of 6426 Marchand street, and Sim Reese, 20, of 250 Paulson avenue. They were treated at the hospital.

Reese, the driver, was arrested on a suspicious person charge after police learned he was using the machine without the consent of the owner and had no driver's license.

BANDS, FLOATS IN TONIGHT'S PAGEANT

Many Groups Here Join Celebration Burying 'Old Man Depression'

A burlesque burial of "Hard Times" will be one of the features of a huge parade and pageant tonight of Pittsburghers who are celebrating the end of the depression and the return to better times.

Gaily decorated floats, costumed mummers, street dancers, drum and bugle corps, bands and various national groups are scheduled to participate. Several college fraternities have entered large floats in the hope of capturing one of the prizes offered for the best-appearing or most humorous of that group.

More than 100 civic, fraternal, national and commercial organizations will be represented in the parade which will be led by a detachment of Pennsylvania state police from Greensburg. Supt. of Police Franklin T. McQuaide will head an escort of Pittsburgh police.

American Legion bands and drum and bugle corps, together with fire companies with their trucks from outlying towns in the Pittsburgh district, will add a colorful note to the celebration. The national groups will include German, Jewish, Hungarian, Polish and Ukranian organizations.

Miss Buelah Corey, of 1301 Sumac street, McKeesport, will represent "Miss Better Times." She will be astride a horse and will be escorted by a mounted guard of honor of 10 women from the Valley Riding Club. The Oakland Board of Trade will join the parade with floats, bands and marchers.

The entire personnel of many business organizations will march in the parade which will include more than a dozen bands, six drum and bugle corps and 27 floats.

Co-Ed Bride Suicide's Mother Tells of Rift

A threat of disinheritance wrecked the marital barque of Henrietta Brien, 18, and Robert Williams, of Bradford, Pa., after it had sailed the placid waters on Pitt campus, Mrs. Nettie Brien, mother of the girl inferred in an affidavit to the coroner. The bride died after taking poison. Mrs. Brien's affidavit, along with other statements, presented to a coroner's jury today, resulted in a verdict of suicide being returned.

The bride of a month took poison May 10 and died 12 days later in Pittsburgh hospital.

Mrs. Brien, in her affidavit, said:

"In the presence of my daughter, Mrs. Williams told her son Robert that he was to be cut out of the will and his allowance would be stopped for school. Over the telephone from Bradford, Williams told my daughter that his people said the marriage was a mistake and he would have to get a divorce."

The highlight in Williams' affidavit was a statement that Mrs. Brien had choked him and taken the wedding ring from him after the girl had swallowed poison.

Attorney Louis Little has been retained by the Brien family to make a further investigation.

Thevenow and His Bride Happy in Reunion Here

Tommy Thevenow, utility infielder for the Pittsburgh Pirates, and his attractive bride—figuratively speaking—are sitting on top of the world again.

They were united here last night following a marital misunderstanding that separated them nine days ago. Thevenow said he did not care to discuss the matter, but remarked:

"We are very happy to be together again."

Mrs. Helen Thevenow, 23, would not say a word and only smiled to questions concerning their separation. She left her home in the Loutellus Apartments, Melwood street, a week ago Wednesday.

When her purse and coat were found on the Twenty-second Street Bridge two days later it was feared she had jumped into the Monongahela River. Meanwhile Thevenow received a special delivery letter from her saying that she was en route to her parents' home. She returned here following her visit there.

Mrs. Thevenow is the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Victor B. Hargitt, of Madison, Ind.

PEABODY PUPILS COMBINE ARTS IN SHOW

By PENELOPE REDD

On leaving the discordant noises of a humdrum street last night and walking into the auditorium of Peabody High School, one suddenly heard the sound of singing and beheld a boy who might have been Rockwell Kent in his youth and a girl of exceptional charm miming the folk song, "Dark-Eyed Sailor." The youngsters were commencing their rehearsal for tonight's single performance of a new adventure in the unity of the arts. The art students from Miss Thoburn's class in Peabody High School listened to the music students in Miss Shute's "A Capella Choir" and from their impressions designed stage settings which they are presenting in a series of music-pictures tonight.

Miss Redd

'DESIGN SONGS'

The art students have elected to interpret the songs of many peoples in the language of design. To Dorothy Ross, a French thirteenth century song becomes a gay pictorial caprice with winsome shepherdess and mediaeval country lad. Or a villanelle from the Netherlands, "Echo Song" is perfectly visualized by Dwight Macgowan in its skipping, mocking pattern of song in mountains vibrating in a tantalizing scale of color values.

Two exquisite impressions are posed by Jane Grubbs. She is a Pavlowa-like figure seen against a screen of silver swans designed by Caroline Loeffler from the inspiration of a seventeenth century madrigal. Enchanting is the synthesis of song and design in "I Beheld Her Beautiful as a Dove," where Anne Tomeles evokes the mood of a Persian miniature with jeweled trees as a fawn and maiden come to life with unabashed poetic directness.

Two Russian songs, one of the peasants, depicted in a design by Helen Campe, and the second, a [illegible]rious one by Caroline Loeffler, [illegible]w. The group of three Negro [illegible]ituals mimed against Dwight Macgowan's jaunty cabin is perhaps the moving pictorial of the entire series.

SCHOLARSHIP BENEFIT

The program will conclude with "Hosanna," a seventeenth century English canticle, visualized as the heavenly choirs where living young archangels blend with painted ones in an effective composition.

The ineffable effect of looking at youth imprisoned momentarily in beauty while listening to their bright voices is like glimpsing some world that might be true could we but find the way.

The youngsters have organized this program as a benefit for a scholarship fund. The modest fee of 25 cents is charged as a contribution. The only performance will be given tonight in the Peabody High School auditorium at 8 o'clock.

Wilkinsburg Youth To Follow Desert, Mountain Trails

Tired of the city turmoil, Gene Whitlach, 21, of Wilkinsburg, left today for a tramp through the Southwest to Mexico and Central and South America.

Whitlatch, a student at Pitt Law School, will follow the Spanish Gila River trail through mountains and desert canyons, and continue south through the tropical jungle of lower Mexico and Central America. He intends to visit the mission posts of the Methodist Conference throughout the journey. The tour will last several months.

When he returns, he says, he will spend some time writing and cataloguing the experiences of his trip. After that, he expects to take his master's degree in English and modern writing at either the University of Michigan or the University of Southern California.

MAUG WAS N. Y. PHONE CALLER, WOMAN SAYS

County Detective Chief George W. Murren has been notified by New York detectives that a woman confectionery store propietor in Brooklyn, believes John Maug and Edward Turpac were the two men who entered her store Wednesday night and made a telephone call to Parole Officer J. C. Coulter at Verona.

The woman, shown pictures of the killers, Maug and Turpac, fugitive killers from the Western Penitentiary, said Maug put through the call and fled without hanging up the receiver.

The New York advices said 200 detectives and all police of the Brooklyn district were ordered to hunt the convicts.

Murren believes the caller was Maug, and that he desired to bargain with the penitentiary for surrender.

NEW ELECTION ZONES ASKED

After a petition was filed by voters of the First and Second wards of Wilkinsburg asking creation of additional voting precincts, Judge Samuel H. Gardner yesterday appointed John L. Hernan, Thomas E. Whitten and Dr. E. L. Piper as commissioners to report to the court on the advisability of the action.

The First Ward now has seven precincts and the Second has six. The petitioners say some of these are too large for the vote to be handled properly.

Judge Gardner has appointed C. D. McCarthy to be judge of elections in the Ninth District of the Ninth Ward in place of Robert Walsh.

PARK BUS LINE MOVE LAUNCHED

Seeking to organize a fight against the so-called monopoly of the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company, the County Commissioners will meet again next Wednesday with independent bus owners to plan service to and from the county parks at a nominal fare.

County Commissioner C. M. Barr said thousands of residents have never seen the county parks because of the high transportation fees. He said the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company had refused to set a reasonable fare.

Ten representatives of independent bus lines met with the Commissioners yesterday.

Erie Jobless Win Fight for Lodgings

ERIE, Pa., June 2.—(AP.)—Unemployed men, cut off from accustomed city funds for lodging, made a completely successful one-night stand at Salvation Army headquarters. Refusing to sleep outdoors, as suggested by the City Charity Commission, they defied anyone to throw them out.

Now Salvation Army officials say they may remain there—free.

Workmen Freeze Water, Then Fix Pipe

ELLWOOD CITY, Pa., June 2.—(AP.)—Clever, these "trouble shooters."

A repair crew of the Ellwood City Water Company found a leak in the mains. It was inconvenient to get to the shutoff, so they dug down to the leak, packed ice around the pipe, poured in salt and froze the water.

Then they repaired the leak. After awhile the ice melted and the water flowed again.

PRESSED STEEL AUDIT GRANTED

Attorney George D. Wick and Walter A. Bonitz, receivers of the Pressed Steel Car Company, were authorized yesterday by Federal Judge R. M. Gibson to employ Main & Co. to audit records and accounts of the car company. The survey will cover a period from January 1, 1929, and May 10, inclusive.

Copper, 35% — Steel, 12%

PLOT CHARGED TO ARMY MEN BY M'GOVERN

County Commissioner C. C. McGovern today had charged that a conspiracy existed to maintain the government flying field at Rodgers Field, although county officials have announced their intention of abondoning the field, moving the Army base to the Municipal Airport on the Lebanon Church road.

McGovern made this announcement following receipt of a letter yesterday from Capt. Samuel Eaton, commandant of Rodgers Field, who said it would cost at least $48,000 to move the Army hangars to the county port.

Commenting on the letter, McGovern said:

"There is a first-hand conspiracy existing among those Army fliers to keep the Army field at Rodgers Field. We can move them over there to our new port very cheaply."

Director A. M. Marion of parks and aviation informed the Commissioners the Army hangars could be moved for approximately $10,000.

McGovern said he had been in touch with the government officials in Washington and that the arrangement to move the field was satisfactory to both the county and Army air chiefs.

McGovern is willing to have the county move the hangars to the new airport without cost to the government.

REFUNDS URGED AS CHARITY AID

County officials who are turning back parts of their salaries to the treasury will meet next week to determine whether some of the refunded money can be used to help the Pittsburgh and McKeesport Helping Hand associations. The law prevents the County Commissioners from making an outright donation to these associations, it was said at the Commissioners' meeting yesterday.

J. Rogers Flannery, head of the Pittsburgh association, and Watson McKee, representing the McKeesport branch, appeared before the Commissioners yesterday to ask for a donation, which the Commissioners said they could not grant.

Commissioner C. M. Barr expressed the opinion that the money the officials are refunding to the county actually belonged to them and could be used as they wish.

Future Tax Slash Favored for Oil City

OIL CITY, Pa., June 2.—Oil City Council, finding it impossible to cut taxes from 1 mills this year, went on record for a reduction of 4½ mills in 1934, and for similar reduction in 1935, unless unforseen developments occur. Council reduced city salaries 10 per cent over $750 for the current year, effecting saving of $17,000.

CLASS AT W.-J. HEARS SERMON

WASHINGTON, Pa., June 2.—All commercial and business declines, including the depression from which the nation is now emerging, have been preceded by a general decline in basic religion, the Rev. Louis H. Evans, pastor of the Third Presbyterian Church, Pittsburgh, told the graduating class of Washington and Jefferson College in his baccalaureate sermon here last night.

Dr. Evans said scientists of today were moving away from atoms toward spiritual things.

Today was alumni day with addresses by John D. McKee, alumni secretary of Wooster (O.) College, and President Ralph C. Hutchison.

Class reunions and an old-fashioned melodrama, "Rose of the Southland, by the Buskin Club, a faculty reception and alumni dance also were scheduled.

Graduates will receive diplomas tomorrow morning, with Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes as speaker. He will receive an honorary degree and his address will be broadcast over a nation-wide hookup of the National Broadcasting Company.

Facilities for the broadcast are being installed by station WCAE, which will broadcast the speech locally.

Value of Canapes in Diet Too Often Overlooked

These appetizers, available in endless variety and susceptible to flavoring to suit any taste, help balance the diet and furnish essential vitamins as well as nutrition.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,
United States Senator From New York,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

I frequently refer to the importance of a "well-balanced diet." It is essential for the proper growth and development of every child and adult. Yet often the well-balanced diet provides the necessary elements for the welfare of the body, but does not tempt the palate. It is for this reason that appetizers, like canapes, are valuable. They stimulate the appetite, promote the flow of gastric juices and aid in digestion.

Canapes are small crackers or bits of bread spread with various fillings, and there are many fillings from which to choose. Sardines, sardine paste, anchovies, anchovy paste, cheese, cheese spreads, deviled meats, crabmeat, shrimp, tunafish, lobster and caviar are a few of the popular canape fillings. Spices and seasoning with pimento, onions, mayonnaise, French dressing, capers, stuffed, plain or ripe olives, Worcestershire sauce, chili sauce, tabasco sauce, ketchup, mustard or pickles are added to the filling, depending upon individual taste.

In addition to their appeal to the palate, these spreads are nutritious because they contain important ingredients. For example, lobster, shrimp and crabmeat are valuable foods. They are rich in vitamins A, C and D. More iodine is found in these foods than in any other forms of meat.

Fresh or canned shellfish may be used for making canapes. If fresh lobster is used, choose a small one. They are more tender and easier to prepare.

APPETIZING SPREADS

Caviar is frequently used as a spread for canapes. Caviar, the preserved roe, or eggs, of certain kinds of fish, at one time was a luxury and only used by the rich. Today it is within the reach of everyone. More frequent use of this appetizing spread should be made.

Anchovy, another popular filling for canapes, is obtained from a small fish of the herring family. Imported anchovies come from along the Mediterranean coast, where they are found in abundance. The domestic brand comes from off the shores of the northern Atlantic states and California. The fish are prepared by removing heads and intestines, then packing in rock salt. They are also packed, whole or filleted, in oil or salt.

CHEESE USED

Of course cheese may be used as a spread for canapes, and no one will deny the nutritive value of cheese. It contains valuable proteins, and is a rich source of lime and other important minerals. If eaten in moderation, cheese is easily digested.

Many persons prefer deviled meats such as ham or tongue, as canape filling. Others resort to canned foods that contain the same nutritive elements found in fresh cooked foods.

The value of canapes in the diet is too often overlooked. They supply that necessary tartness which give bland foods an appetizing taste. Unless you overindulge in these foods you will benefit by using them, and certainly you will have no cause for complaint.

Reed to Give Talk At Bellevue P. T. A.

Alexander Reed, of the Pittsburgh Board of Education, will speak at the final meeting of the Bellevue Parent-Teacher Association in Grant School, Bellevue Tuesday afternoon.

Other speakers include Superintendent J. M. Mowls and Miss Agness Dickson, principal of the grade schools. Officers for next year will be installed with Mrs. W. S. Kuhl succeeding herself as president.

RECIPES BY PRUDENCE PENNY

MUSTARD PICKLES—3 pints fine white onions, 2 heads cauliflower, ½ head cabbage, 1 pint green tomatoes, 2 small red peppers, 2 stalks celery, 6 tablespoons dry mustard, 1 quart tiny green cucumbers, 1 quart large green cucumbers, 2 quarts vinegar, 1 tablespoon tumeric, 1 cup flour, 1 teaspoon each celery seed, yellow mustard seed and curry powder, 2 cups brown sugar, ½ teaspoon mixed spices.

Cut large cucumbers into slices. Cut tomatoes, onions, peppers, celery and cabbage. Divide cauliflower into small flowerettes. Do not chop vegetables, but cut into size of walnuts. Soak in a brine made from one cup salt to a gallon of water. Bring to boil in this brine after they have soaked 24 hours. Drain. Mix mustard, tumeric and flour in a large pan. Add a small amount of vinegar and heat mixture, stirring constantly until thick. Add the rest of vinegar, then add spices, sugar and vegetables. Cook 5 minutes and seal.

* * *

ROAST LEG OF LAMB WITH CARAWAY—5-pound leg of lamb, 4 slices of bacon, 2 small shreds garlic, 1 pound carrots, ½ teaspoon caraway seeds, salt and pepper to taste.

Cut bacon and garlic into small pieces. Make small incisions down into the meat here and there with a small pointed knife and stuff into each incision some of this mixture. Continue until all is used. Place in roasting pan and brown on all sides. Add salt, pepper and caraway seeds. Add hot water enough to almost half cover, then bake. When partly done, add carrots cut into rings. Finish gravy by adding one teaspoon cornstarch, dissolved in cold water and a little finely-cut parsley.

* * *

APRICOT ANGEL PUDDING—2 cups dried apricots, 4 cups water, ½ cup sugar, 1 cup milk, ¼ cup sugar, ⅛ teaspoon salt, ½ cup marshmallow cream, 2 tablespoons gelatin, ¼ cup cold water, 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 2 tablespoons cornstarch, 2 egg whites, 1 cup whipping cream.

Wash apricots, add four cups water, cover and simmer until soft. Add ½ cup sugar, beat until smooth. Cook uncovered until water is well evaporated. Soften gelatin in ¼ cup cold water and dissolve in hot apricots. Add lemon juice and rind. Cool. Scald milk, add cornstarch, ¼ cup sugar and salt (blended together). Stir constantly until thick and smooth. Combine with apricot mixture and marshmallow cream. Fold in stiffly-whipped egg whites and serve with whipped cream.

* * *

STRAWBERRY GLACE TARTS—Tart shells: 1 egg, ¼ cup sugar, ½ cup butter, 1½ cups flour.

Beat egg, add sugar, mix in butter until well blended. Sift flour once before measuring, add flour and mix well. Chill. Roll very thin, and cut into circles to spread on backs of tart forms. Bake until

OFFICIALS SEE NIGHT COURT PREMIERE

The dark side of Pittsburgh life, along with its "humorous" side, was revealed in the first session of the new Night Court in Central Police Station last night, when more than 200 spectators, including prominent city officials, looked on.

At a flower-bedecked desk sat Magistrate Leo Rothenberg, along with Mayor John S. Herron, Supt. of Police Franklin T. McQuaide, his assistant, Ben R. Marshall; Magistrate John J. Sweeney, of the South Side Court, and Magistrate Thomas D. Jones, of Morals Court. In the back of the "judge" sat his family, Councilmen Frank L. Duggan, C. B. Connelley, Public Works Director Edward G. Lang, Chief Surgeon Daniel E. Sable, of the Public Safety Department, and Arthur C. Kaufmann. Detective Inspector Frank Boyd and Traffic Inspector Jacob Dorsey were also in the gathering.

Mayor Herron, the city's chief magistrate, was accorded the night's honor of holding the first hearings.

He discharged three men, the first three drunks on the calendar. Rothenberg resumed the hearings of 27 other cases with charges of drunkenness, disorderly conduct and violating city ordinances.

Henry Keller was the first case heard by Mayor Herron.

The Mayor:

"How did you get into trouble?"

Keller:

"Don't you drink, Mayor?"

The Mayor:

"Go on home and go to work in the morning."

SOLDIER HERE DIES IN CRASH

MARCH FIELD, RIVERSIDE, Cal., June 2.—(AP.)—The good providence which has attended the flying career of Lieut. Charles M. McHenry, of Los Angeles, Army pilot, pursued him into his first major crash, which brought death to three of his comrades.

Fortune not only permitted McHenry to crawl from the wreckage of a service transport on a mountainside in Cajon Pass, a few miles east of San Bernardino, yesterday, with only bruises to show for his narrow escape.

An inquest was scheduled today over the bodies of three privates killed when the ship crashed in a fog.

Among the dead was Addison C. Spencer, Charleroi, Pa.

CHARLEROI, Pa., June 2.—News of the death of Addison C. Spencer, of Charleroi, in a plane crash, was the first information concerning him relatives here had received since 1928.

Mrs. Margaret Spencer, 111 Lincoln avenue, mother of the victim, said she had been conducting a search for him for five years. She learned of his death from Marie Smith, a friend of the son.

THOMAS SPEECH STIRS RIOT

NEW YORK, June 2.—(AP.)—Another free-for-all occurred at the College of the City of New York yesterday when Norman Thomas, Socialist leader, delivered a speech upholding participants in a pacifist rally last Monday and criticizing Dr. Frederick B. Robinson, president of the college, for wielding his umbrella on the demonstrators.

Addressing an open-air mass meeting of more than 1,000, Thomas was forced to halt his speech when students of opposite sympathies clashed throughout the audience.

delicately browned—about 10 or 12 minutes in quick oven 375 degrees. Makes 8 tarts. Cool before filling.

Butter custard: 1 egg yolk, 2 tablespoons sugar, ⅓ cup milk, ¼ cup softened butter, ¼ teaspoon almond extract.

Put egg yolk in saucepan and blend in sugar. Then add milk, stirring until mixture is well blended. Place over moderate flame and stir vigorously, and take quickly from heat just before it reaches boiling point. (Pause in the stirring to watch for the first bubble—it will take about 1½ minutes.) Allow to cool, but not chill, then beat in softened butter with rotary beater, beating until mixture is cool and very thick. Blend in extract and chill.

Strawberries and glace syrup: 1 quart strawberries, rind of 1 orange, ¾ cup water, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, ¾ cup sugar.

Wash and hull berries, saving most attractive ones to place in baked tart shells, about ⅔ of the quart, and be sure they are not over-ripe. Cut orange rind in large pieces and add with water to remaining ⅓ of berries. Crush berries to get all the juice, then strain the mixture—there should be about ¾ cup liquid. Add lemon juice and sugar, and cook until like jelly, about 11 minutes.

Place a generous teaspoon of the custard into each of the shells, then place in each 5 or 6 berries, then drip over the berries the cooled glace, or jelly. These are delicious.

DULUTH, Minn., June 2.—(AP.)—Ted Williard, Arcadia, Fla., was thrown into the water of Grand Lake while struggling with a big northern pike.

Breaking off the line and abandoning his rod, reel and boat, the southerner swam three blocks to shore, holding fast to the fish.

MILITIA POLICES CAPITOL SITE

BISMARCK, N. D., June 2.—(INS.)—National Guard troops policed the new state capitol today.

Gov. William Langer, who proclaimed martial law in the city, directed negotiations for a compromise between building contractors and striking laborers.

DEMPSEY TALKS BACK -:- Jack Answers Tunney On 'Long Count' Fight -:- ON THE AIR

Test of Radio Intelligence Begins

Long's Sport Review WCAE Feature

This week's highlights in the world of sports are reviewed by James J. Long, Sun-Telegraph sports columnist, over WCAE tonight at 7 o'clock.

The Fulton School Chorus of 35 voices is heard over WCAE today at 4:45 during the Sun-Telegraph Family, children's program directed by Miss Jane A. White, assistant curator of education at Carnegie Museum.

News flashes by Louis L. Kaufman, Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News, are broadcast today at 9:05 a. m. over WCAE, and 12:15 p. m., 2:15 p. m. and 6:30 p. m. over WCAE-WJAS.

The Globe-Trotter will be heard on WCAE only tomorrow at 9:05 a. m., 12:15 p. m. and 2:15 p. m. His 6:30 broadcast will be cancelled in deference to a network broadcast of the American Derby.

Jack Dempsey's reply to Gene Tunney's account of the famous "long count" in Chicago; the first of a series of tests to determine the collective intelligence quotient of the American listening public, and three program premieres head tonight's ether offerings.

Jack Dempsey

Taking time off as promoter of the Schmeling-Baer fight to make his rebuttal, Dempsey airs his story of the bout in which he lost his championship laurels to Tunney over CBS-WJAS at 9:30 during Edwin C. Hill's "Inside Story" broadcast.

The I. Q. tests, which experts believe will do some eye-opening, reversing the process of belittling, are to be launched over NBC-KDKA at 10:15 by Dr. Frank N. Freeman, professor of educational psychology at the University of Chicago. Tonight's broadcast is explanatory; the actual quiz will be conducted June 9, and the results announced June 16 over the same network at the same hour.

Program Debuts

The new Chesterfield series, combining Grace Moore, operatic and musical comedy star; Lou Holtz, dialect comedian (assisted by Benny Baker as the tall, eager Shawowsky), and Lennie Hayton's orchestra, opens on WJAS at 10 p. m. The programs are listed for 30 minutes a week, with Norman Brokenshire m. c.-ing.

Miss Moore.

KDKA at 7:30 brings the first of a new orchestral series, "Pastoral," conducted by Joseph Littau.

Featuring Howard Price, new Pittsburgh tenor, as the "Magic Voice of Kaufmann's Sixty-second Anniversary," the second of the new nightly, except Sunday, musical series introduced on WCAE last night is presented at 6:45 p. m. Beginning tomorrow and continuing throughout the month the program will be on the air at 7:15 p. m.

At 9 on the same station, another "Message From Gimbels," weekly show introducing new singers with the Gimbel Ensemble, is presented. Edgar Morris, tenor, of 300 Aidyl avenue, Brookline, is tonight's soloist.

Geisha Girl Play On 5 Stations

Five stations in the Pittsburgh area present this week's American Weekly drama, "A Grain of Sand," starring Fay Bainter, on the following schedule today:

WSAZ, Huntington, W. Va., 1:30 p. m.; WHBC, Canton, O., 2 p. m.; WKBN, Youngstown, O., 4 p. m.; WALR, Zanesville, O., 5 p. m., and WJAC, Johnstown, 5:15 p. m.

The playlet, based on an article published in the next issue of the big feature magazine distributed each Sunday with the Sun-Telegraph, reveals the astonishing career of a Japanese girl sold as a geisha by her father.

CBS Orders Lombardo Off NBC

By AIRCASTER

Nothing pleases Irvin S. Cobb more than to hang about the studio after his Wednesday night broadcasts and swap tales.

Often this custom brings anecdotes to life which find their way into his ad lib broadcasts, as did that one of Wednesday last, which had to do with the domestic scene between a husband and wife, who fought because they were in agreement. Says Irvin:

"Trouble often develops over complete agreement.

"Take the international situation, for instance, there is no disagreement over the European debts to America. In fact there is absolute accord. America is of the opinion that the indebted countries aren't going to pay—and the indebted countries are sure America's right."

* * *

"Play, Guy," said the Columbia officials yesterday in a telegram to the eldest of the Lombardo brothers, now boop-a-dooping in Chicago—"but don't play anymore for the rival network."

The message was sent when CBS learned that NBC was piping the Lombardo music from the Chicago Casino.

Earlier, the Columbia gents insisted that Lombardo certainly would not be on the NBC schedule.

But he had been on twice already. And so the pet bandmaster of Columbia got his orders.

Local Highlights On WJAS Tonight

The theme composition "At Eventide" now being used by Paul Gannon in his nightly program on WJAS at 6:45 is an original composition especially written for this commercial series. Ralph Federer, pianist for the program, wrote the music while Gannon furnished the lyrics.

An unusual radio novelty, Wermes' Saxophone Sextet, will be heard on WJAS tonight at 7:15. Included in the "saxes" played are the "baby soprano" and the gigantic six-foot bass instrument.

Three sisters, the Westons, who follow the style of the Boswells, return tonight for a 6 o'clock program on WJAS.

Ickes' Talk at W. & J. on Network

The one hundred and thirty-second commencement exercises of Washington and Jefferson College, Washington (Pa.), at which Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes will be the principal speaker will be broadcast over a nation-wide NBC-WEAF network through the facilities of WCAE tomorrow at 11:30 a. m.

The topic of Secretary Ickes' address will be "A New Social Order in the Making."

Other speakers to be heard during the ceremonies to be held on the W. & J. campus at the Thompson Memorial Library, are Dr. Ralph C. Hutchinson, president, who will confer the honorary degree of doctor of laws on Secretary Ickes, and Park J. Alexander, secretary of the board of trustees.

In addition, certificates of honor will be awarded to 36 graduates returning to the school after 50 years. The oldest of the latter group is the Rev. Dr. James Smith Barr, of New Wilmington, Pa., who graduated with the class of 1858 and celebrated his one hundredth birthday last December.

Globe-Trotting

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

The Globe Trotter is going garden mad.

Everybody seems to be having trouble with ants, and if there is anything I specialize in, it is ants.

Twelve more letters today from people who are slowly being driven to a dangerous and irresponsible condition from carrying ant hills out of the garden at night and finding more hills there the next morning.

Get working with that carbon bisulphide. It's great stuff even if it has no esthetic characteristics, but when dealing with ants there is no time for refinement.

Take a cane, umbrella, stick, or anything. Punch holes in the hill and around it, and then with an oil can squirt the carbon bisulphide in the holes. Do it at night and cover the holes with paper If there are any ants left the next day at least you will have known that you had done your best.

And as for those Zinnia seeds. Those threats that you will plant me if those seeds don't arrive scare me not at all. The seeds will be at your place in time to plant.

IS IT POSSIBLE?

Indeed It IS . . .

BRAN DATE-NUT BREAD (YEAST)—1 cake compressed yeast, 1 tablespoon sugar, ⅓ cup lukewarm water, 4½ cups all purpose flour, 2½ cups bran flour, 2 cups milk, 2 tablespoons shortening, 1 egg, ½ cup brown sugar, ¾ teaspoon salt, 1 cup chopped walnuts, 1 cup chopped dates.

Dissolve cake of yeast and one tablespoon sugar in the lukewarm water. Mix flour and bran together, adding milk, scalded and cooled; melted shortening, well beaten egg, sugar and salt, walnuts and dates, mixing all thoroughly. Knead well, using more white flour if necessary, keeping soft as possible. Cover, let rise in warm place about two hours, knead again, let rise one-half hour and mold into two loaves and let rise three-fourths hour. Bake in moderate 375 degrees oven one hour.

Chill all ingredients first. Whip cream stiff and fold into dressing. Add sugar and orange juice. Cut fruit and toss all together lightly with dressing and turn into refrigerator trays or into individual molds and freeze about four hours. Serve on lettuce or endive, garnished with pimento-stuffed olives. This serves 16 generously.

Crumble crackers, mix thoroughly with butter and ½-cup sugar. Add cinnamon. Line buttered deep pie tin with ¾ of the mixture. Bake 10 minutes in slow oven.

Put flour, remaining sugar, salt egg yolks in double boiler. Add milk, orange juice and rind. Cook 15 minutes, stirring constantly. Cool and pour into baked pie shell. Cover with meringue made of whites of eggs mixed with powdered sugar. Pile remaining graham cracker mixture on top. Bake 15 minutes in slow oven. Serve with whipped cream and chopped nuts.

RECORD PACE MARKS STOCK UPSURGE

NEW YORK, June 2.—(AP.)—After some hesitancy in early trading, the stock market sprang forward today at a rate of speed unequaled thus far this year and gains of 1 to 3 or more points were recorded over a wide front.

Commodities generally joined the rally, although at a more restricted pace. Wheat, corn, cotton and sugar advanced moderately and secondary bonds generally followed stocks on the upward rush. Various low-priced shares were taken in hand in the first hour, while pivotal issues were inclined to hold to a narrow range. Around noon, however, the leaders drew followings and blocks of 1,000 to 10,000 shares appeared on the tape. Utilities generally gave the best performance.

The share market apparently paid no attention to the proposal made to the Senate Finance Committee to place a temporary tax of 1-10 of 1 per cent on the par value of corporate stock: It was estimated that this tax would bring in around $80,000,000 and obviate the necessity of increasing normal income rates.

Of principal interest to the financial district was the continuance of trade and industrial improvement and opinions expressed by some economic observers that the customary summer dullness might not appear this year. That the business improvement had swung into the ultimate consumption area was indicated by the weekly trade reviews which reported some large department stores already were showing a volume fully 10 per cent ahead of last year.

Despite the strong upward trend of stocks, some brokers were hanging out mild storm signals in the form of warnings that the market was in an over-bought condition and that a substantial corrective setback was needed to improve its internal position.

SYSTEM BUYING U. S. ISSUES

WASHINGTON, June 2.—(INS.)—Continuing open market purchases of United States government securities, the Federal Reserve banks for the week ending May 31 acquired an additional $23,000,000 of these obligations, the Reserve Board announced today.

This brought buying for the last two weeks to $48,000,000 as the Reserve system co-operated in the inflationary drive. Officials said the open market operations would be carried on from time to time as conditions justified.

Gold still is flowing slowly from circulation, the gold reserves of the Reserve banks May 31 having reached $3,519,898,000, the largest figure on record. The increase for the week was $20,000,000. The ratio of gold reserves to circulation and deposit liability was 68.8 per cent, against 62.9 per cent a year ago.

Total circulation increased $17,000,000 for the week. This was entirely seasonal, reflecting withdrawals for the holiday and the week end. Circulation is now $345,000,000 higher than a year ago.

WHEAT RALLIES AFTER DIP

CHICAGO, June 2.—Grain prices showed a downward trend early today.

Sellers predominated, influenced by assertions that conditions directly affecting wheat were bearish, and that a broader demand, particularly when the new crop started to move in volume, would be needed to maintain prices. Opening unchanged to ⅜ lower, wheat afterward sagged all around. Corn also started unchanged to ⅜ off, and subsequently underwent a general setback.

Eastern buying that developed on price downturns lifted wheat later to above yesterday's finish. Corn and oats rallied with wheat. Provisions went upgrade, responsive to sharply higher quotations on hogs.

The following quotations on the Chicago Board of Trade are reported by A. E. Masten & Co.:

Power Passes From Capital To President

—By B. C. FORBES—

HAVE YOU sometimes seen part of a movie reel run so fast that you hadn't time to grasp the picture?

So it is with events at Washington.

B. C. Forbes

One monumental development follows so rapidly on another that the human mind cannot assimilate, digest and appraise them.

Industrial, agricultural, financial, transportation history of revolutionary character is occurring so swiftly that few of us can accurately fathom its fundamental meaning.

What is the net of it all?

FOR ONE thing, dominating power apparently is passing from high finance and big business to the government—more specifically to the Chief Executive.

PRESIDENT WOODROW WILSON declared:

"The world is now run from the counting house."

That was essentially true. The actions of statesmen were governed largely by the activities, aspirations and ambitions of men of affairs.

Politics were subservient to economics. The affairs of nations were governed more by the actions of financiers, capitalists, industrialists, employers, than by the actions of politicians, lawmakers.

SO LONG as the lot of the majority of the people was improving rather than deteriorating, so long as they were able to live in reasonable comfort, so long as they were able to acquire more possessions, so long as they were able (if so willed) to increase their savings, so long as prosperity reigned, public sentiment acquiesced, approved, of this arrangement.

We came to regard as the really "big men" of the nation our powerful financiers, our towering executives, our commanders-in-chief of huge armies of employes. They dwarfed our statesmen and legislators.

SINCE THE 1929 crash, these "big men" have shrunk tremendously in stature and esteem. As conditions sank from bad to worse, as more and more bread winners were denied the opportunity to earn the daily bread of themselves and their families, as more and more small businessmen found it impossible to make ends meet, as our agricultural population sank deeper and deeper into debt, as real estate became worth less and less, as bonds and stocks purchased with hard-earned savings decreased more and more shockingly in market value, the conclusion was reached by more and more of the people that high finance and big business had proved incompetent, had made a mess of their jobs, had proved unfit leaders.

VERY NATURAL was it, therefore, that a "new deal" should be demanded.

THE CARDS are being redealt with a vengeance!

CONTROL OF industry is being wrested from industry and vested in Washington.

The far-reaching, revolutionary significance of this can hardly be fathomed amid all the kaleidoscopic, experimental laws now being rushed on to the statute books.

NOT ONLY so, but it is hardly an exaggeration to say that Congress has abdicated.

Powers not possessed by any ruler in modern times, powers transcending any relegated to or arrogated by any constitutional official, have been accorded the President of the United States.

He, in turn, has been instrumental in creating a myriad of "dictators" unmatched in any civilized nation.

WE HAVE speedily, even enthusiastically dropped into the discard that heretofore cherished dictum, "that nation is best governed which is least governed."

We are flying pell-mell to the opposite extreme.

WHAT THE ultimate outcome will be no mortal can foretell.

At least, however, we should take time to pause and try earnestly to recognize and realize the fundamentally revolutionary nature of what we are doing.

PIRATES' BATTING ORDER GIVEN DRASTIC SHAKEUP

SPORTS

REDBIRDS TOUGH BUT NOT INVINCIBLE

DIZZY DEAN lost five of his first seven games this season and was trimmed by the Cubs the first two times he faced them, but he was back in his stride in time to subdue the Bruins in his third start against them yesterday and to pitch Pittsburgh out of first place. The fact that Dean now is clicking in that fashion will give you an idea of the fight the Pirates are going to have on their hands to beat out the Cardinals. When right, Dizzy is just about the best pitcher in the league. From all appearances he's very much right at present, and with Dean backed up by such a wealth of additional hurling talent as is represented by Carleton, Hallahan, Walker, Mooney, Vance, Haines and Johnson, the Redbirds probably will be plenty tough from here on in, though not necessarily invincible.

Dizzy Dean

The wresting of first place from the Bucs climaxed a drive in which the Cards have won seven games in a row and 12 of their last 13. With the exception of 24 hours following the games of May 14, when Pittsburgh shared the top berth with New York in a tie, the Pirates had been in undisputed possession of the leadership since the evening of April 30. Today is only the seventh day since the race started more than seven weeks ago on which the Rovers have not been either alone in first place or tied for it.

The loss of the leadership is nothing to worry about. As a matter of fact, the Cards owe their rise to the top only to the fact that they have played three games more than the Pirates and won two of them. When the Bucs play those extra three games they may win all of them. In the "Lost" column the leader still is Pittsburgh, the Pirates having suffered fewer defeats than any other club in either major league except the Yankees.

Even if the Gibsons do not recover first place quickly, it will not mean much. They do not pay off at the pennant window on June standings, and besides it may help the Pirates to be relieved of the strain of pace-setting for a time. The Cards are not going to walk away with the flag. Good as they are, they'll have their bad spells, like the present one of the Bucs. They're playing ahead of themselves now, just as the Pirates were doing earlier in the race.

LATEST INFORMATION IS that the purchase of Catcher Rick Ferrell and Pitcher Lloyd Brown from the Browns cost the new Red Sox owners $50,000, not $30,000, as at first reported. It is also said that the price paid for Outfielder Dusty Cooke was $35,000, topping an offer of $30,000 made by Brooklyn 24 hours earlier.

In the judgment of Billy Evans, business manager of the Cleveland club, Ferrell is now the No. 1 catcher of the American League. The only men to outrank him previously were Bill Dickey and Mickey Cochrane, and now, according to Evans, Dickey's appendix trouble has hurt his efficiency and Cochrane still is in his 1932 slump.

IN THE PITTSBURGH district and some other parts of the country it's mushball, playgroundball, softball, kittenball, or indoorball taken out into the open. But Lansing, Mich., plays diamond ball.

The players out there protest vigorously against the name softball or mushball, and ask any one calling the game by that name to stand in front of a pitched ball and see his mistake. They object to playgroundball, too, declaring that it suggests a children's game.

THEY PLAY THE game differently in Lansing, where there are leagues and clubs of all sizes and ages. In the two faster leagues they have changed the rules of playground ball, and their nine-inning games are played on a diamond on which the bases are 60 feet apart and the pitching distance is 45 feet. A 12-inch inseam diamond ball is used. This system is in contrast to the type of game played in many other cities, where the bases are 45 feet apart, the pitching distance is 35 feet, and the ball is 14-inch inseam or 12-inch outseam. The sport is so popular in Lansing that it attracts from 3,000 to 5,000 persons to night games.

Babe Ruth

THOUGH BABE RUTH is known to the home followers of the Yankees in New York as a right fielder, he is a left fielder in all except one of the seven other American League cities. He used to play right field in three towns, but the shifting of the Indians to Municipal Stadium in Cleveland has added one more field on which the Babe goes to left.

Ruth now plays right field only at the Yankee Stadium and in Washington. In the two other Eastern cities on the circuit and all four of the Western group he always is in left. Sun fields determine his post. He is kept out of the gardens where the glare is strongest. Miller Huggins started it because Bob Meusel could play the sun field better than Ruth, and to save the Bambino's batting eye.

WITH ALL DUE respect to what the acquisition of Al Simmons, George Haas and Jimmy Dykes has done for the White Sox, American League critics insist that the club still would be far down in the race but for the development of Luke Appling and Minter Hayes into a great combination at shortstop and second base.

Hayes is tagged by Joe Cronin as the best double-play man at second base on any American League club. Coached by Dykes, Appling has become an equally capable shortstop.

BOXING APPEARS TO be quite a hazard in Denver, judging from the way two principals fared on the same bill there recently. Fans who were all steamed up in anticipation of seeing a big night of fighting witnessed less than six minutes of action all told in a special double windup. The doctors had to do more work than the fighters. In the first feature event Emilio Martinez took on Jack Brady, but in the first round Martinez's right arm was broken just above the wrist. Then Buddy Jackson and Willie Williams went on for the second half of the dual card, but again the fighting ended in the first round, when one of Jackson's punches broke Williams' jaw in three places.

WHEN THE AMERICAN Ryder Cup team lands in England, the British customs officials will see the biggest and oldest collection of golf clubs ever owned by any individual player. The owner is Leo Diegel, and the collection now numbers 50 clubs.

There are 15 woods of various kinds. There are drivers, brassies, spoons and brassie cleeks. There are five putters of various weights, faces and pitches. And there are 30 irons, some of which are said to beggar description. Diegel features four jiggers.

A PAIR OF exceptional grid tutors will be in charge when Lou Little, head coach at Columbia, and Tuss McLaughry, head coach at Brown, jointly conduct a summer football school for coaches at Columbia from August 21 to September 1.

Kid Chocolate

The course is sponsored by the teachers' college of Columbia, and students attending will receive a credit of two points toward a degree in physical education. The enrollment list already is assuming large proportions.

LOUIS GUTIERREZ, manager of Kid Chocolate, insists that it's a mistake to figure the featherweight champion as almost done. The pilot promises a big comeback by the Cuban Negro. "Chocolate is not burnt out," declares Gutierrez. "He is just the victim of too many good times. A fighter can't stay up every night until 6 o'clock in the morning, as Chocolate was doing, and be at his best for more than a couple of rounds. Two weeks before the Watson fight, Chocolate weighed only 119 pounds, and I was fearful about the outcome when he stepped into the ring for that bout. Every time he got up on his toes there was nothing to it, but he had too many flat-footed moments to please me. I'm going to lay him off for a month. We have an offer to take on Watson again in London, and the match will be staged before the summer is over. But first, Chocolate has got to rest.

DOUBLES MATCHES IN SCHOLASTIC TENNIS CONFERENCE FINAL ON TREES FIELD COURTS . . . MT. LEBANON RETAINS TITLE BY BEATING SHADY SIDE ACADEMY, MAKING A 5-0 SWEEP

MOUNT LEBANON WINS SCHOOL NET TITLE

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

The talented racquet representatives of Mount Lebanon High School struck top stride yesterday to down Shady Side Academy's spirited crew on the Pitt rectangles, 5-0, in the final contest of the Interscholastic Tennis Conference and thereby capture for the second time in the two seasons of the loop's existence the circuit championship and the University of Pittsburgh Cup.

The Lebanonians, leaders of Suburban Section II, had blanked Wilkinsburg, Section III victors, the previous afternoon, while Shady Side, survivors of the Suburban Section I race, had nosed out Taylor Allderdice High, city premier and holder of the Pittsburgh Tennis Association flagon.

Vice President Austin Famariss, of the P. T. A., represented the district net body at the conference windup and congratulated the triumphant crew in behalf of their senior brethren of the courts. The summary:

Singles—Henry Ackerman defeated James Arensberg, 7-5, 8-6; Ralph Baaid defeated Thomas Lynch, 6-2, 6-0; Robert Grier defeated Allerton Miller, 6-4, 6-1.

Doubles—Ackereman and Grier defeated Arensberg and Sunstein, 6-1, 6-3. Dejohn and Fay defeated Lynch and Miller, 8-6, 7-5.

©1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc., Great Britain rights reserved. DRAWN IN ENTEBBE - Uganda

I drew this picture last night in a city overlooking Lake Victoria in the heart of Africa. Not far away, near Lake Tanganyika, is the sacred mountain of Mwariye, where the celebrated chiefs of the Kibondo tribe are buried. This peak has been made taboo, and nobody is permitted to gaze at the mountain sepulchre of black royalty under pain of death.

The gangster, handcuffed around the neck, is a member of the Gang tribe of Uganda. (They have gangs in Africa.) This log, which is fastened around the gangster's neck, is made of ebony, and heavier than the man whom I sketched wearing it.

As I sat on the veranda of the hotel I saw a steamboat enter the harbor. Believe It Or Not this boat was built in England, over 8000 miles away, and was mailed in small pieces by parcel post to the center of Africa, where it was reassembled on the shore of this great lake.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: THE THIRTEENTH POET LAUREATE—William Wordsworth (1770-1850) was made Poet Laureate of England on the death of Southey, having accepted this honor upon the condition "that nothing should be expected of him." He held the honor from 1843 to his death in 1850 and never wrote a line of poetry during the seven years of his incumbency.

TOMORROW: THE IMMORTAL FALL GUY.

GIBSON MOVES TO IMPROVE BUC ATTACK

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Forbes Field was quiet today, but signs and portents point to plenty of excitement on the morrow, what with the Pirates out of first place, a big shakeup in their batting order impending and the Reds coming up from Cincinnati to take on the Buccaneers in a doubleheader. The original chart for Forbes Field called for a single contest between the two clubs this afternoon, but the Red owners asked for a Saturday dual bill and they will be accommodated, weather permitting.

Manager Gibson's peeve over the recent behavior of his team, which was mentioned in these columns yesterday, crystallized into action last night when the pilot announced a rather drastic change in his battlefront to be effective tomorrow.

ARKY REPLACES LINDY

Gibby will yank the slumping Fred Lindstrom out of the second notch of the order and will place Arky Vaughan in Lindy's spot. Pie Traynor will move up one notch to third and Paul Waner will hit in the cleanup position. Lindstrom will fit somewhere in the lower bracket of the order.

Speaking of the new lineup, Gibson said:

"We have seen entirely too many runners left on the bases and it is important that something be done. The hitters have tightened to such an extent they are not doing themselves justice and it is my belief a shakeup will relieve the tension. The new order may or may not be permanent."

The high-flyin' Redbirds, of St. Louis, made a mess of the Cubs yesterday as they won a contest that gave them undisputed possession of first place—over the slipping Buccos, who were idle. And there is nothing to indicate the Cardinals are putting on a morning-glory act, in view of the condition of their pitching staff, plus a combination of hustling performers who seem to be charged with something or other.

Dizzy Dean made the Bears jump through in the crucial contest at Wrigley Field. Dizzy is just one of a cluster of clever sharpshooters who can get a lot of stuff on the ball. Sergt. Street has the best lefthander in the National League in Bill Hallahan. Bill may have to bow to Lefty Grove, but he may rise to Lefty's stature in time. In Tex Carleton, Street has another ace, and when he has to call upon some pitcher other than these three he can survey a field comprising Sylvester Johnson, Dazzy Vance, Bill Walker and Jim Mooney. Not bad; not bad!

The all-around brilliance of Pepper Martin doubtless has been a big factor in the first-place drive of the rollicking Redbirds. Pepper, in the first place, has been a standout since he forsook the pasture to play the hot corner position, a task he has dismissed with remarkable efficiency. Martin is up around the leaders of the league in batting and he is the best run-maker in the circuit.

DUROCHER CEMENTS CLUB

It should be stated, however, that the Cards did not put on any first-place airs until Leo Durocher transferred his allegiance from Cincinnati to St. Louis. The lad who has been joshed about his batting really is one of the best defensive shortstops in the sport. Frank Frisch, great and valuable as he is, cannot fill the shortfield role, but Durocher has plugged the gap and the Street machine is clicking.

Of course, Rogers Hornsby didn't evince much pleasure as his mates trimmed the Cubs on the latter's home grounds. Not much! The drop of the Pirates and the rise of the Redbirds to the top may have been secondary to the reaction, The Rajah experienced in seeing his once beloved Bears flopping all over the place.

YANKS BLANKED BY MAMAUX

NEWARK, N. J., June 2.—(AP.)—The New York Yankees, who haven't been shut out in a regular American League game since August of 1931, didn't even threaten to score against Newark in a listless exhibition game yesterday and bowed to their International League "farm" team, 2 to 0.

The Yanks got only two hits and two walks off Al Mamaux, Newark manager, and until two were out in the ninth inning they got only one runner past first base. Roy Schalk's home run with Jack Saltzgaver on base in the fourth accounted for both Newark tallies.

The score by innings:

Batteries—Jabionowski and Perkins; Mamaux and Kies.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 2.—(AP.)—Louis Meyer, of Huntington Park, Cal., was presented with $18,000 in money, an automobile and a large trophy as rewards for his record-breaking victory in the 500-mile race here last Tuesday.

Wilbur Shaw, of Indianapolis, who finished second, received $9,100; Lou Moore, Los Angeles, who was third, got $4,100; Chet Gardner, Long Beach, Cal., fourth, $2,400, and H. W. (Stubby) Stubblefield, Los Angeles, fifth, $3,250.

Stubble field received more, although he finished fifth, than Gardner did, because of gifts from automobile accessory companies.

The speedway management divided $31,100 among the first 10 drivers to finish and $9,100 of consolation money among others of the starting field of 42.

Dave Evans, Columbus, Ind., who was sixth, got $1,450; Tony Gulotta, Kansas City, seventh, $1,300; Russell Snowberger, Philadelphia, eighth, $1,200; Zeke Meyers, Germantown, Pa., ninth, $1,150, and Luther Johnson, South Bend, Ind., tenth, $1,100.

CARDS' DRIVE CARRIES TEAM TO FIRST PLACE

CUBS BEATEN AS REDBIRDS TAKE LEAD

Associated Press.

The St. Louis Cardinals have climaxed an almost uninterrupted climb from seventh place in the National League to the league leadership. They attained the top yesterday, displacing the idle Pittsburgh Pirates, by defeating the Chicago Cubs, 6 to 1, with Dizzy Dean turning in a great slab performance.

Dean's six-hit pitching was the most important factor in the Cards' seventh straight triumph, but his mates pounded Guy Bush lustily, received the benefit of five errors and put the game away with a four-run rally in the seventh.

GIANTS BEAT PHILS

The New York Giants continued their unbroken string of victories over the Phillies by winning the other National League game, 7-2, as Fred Fitzsimmons settled down after a bad start and yielded only one hit in the last six innings.

Cold weather forced postponement of the Brooklyn-Boston double-header, leaving the Dodgers with three bargain bills to play in as many days.

Detroit's chances of getting out of the American League's second division look mighty slim, but as long as they can pin their faith on Tommy Bridges and Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe, the Tigers are hard to beat.

Bridges already has two one-hit games to his credit this season, while Rowe, the big 21-year-old freshman righthander, now appears to be living up to the training-camp ballyhoo.

ROWE TRIMS CHISOX

The 6-foot 4-inch, 205-pound schoolboy put it over the veteran Ted Lyons and the slugging Chicago White Sox yesterday to win, 3-1, and bring his mound record up even with three wins and three defeats.

Wesley Ferrell, Cleveland's ace, came through with a three-hit game to give the fourth-place Indians a 3-to-1 triumph over the St. Louis Browns and increase their margin over the White Sox to one and one-half games.

The last-place Boston Red Sox, blanked by Bill McAfee for six innings, rose in the eighth to score four times and tie the count, then added two more runs off Al Thomas in the thirteenth to beat Washington, 7-5.

Arena Holds Novel Draw for Bout Positions on All-Star Card

BOXERS GATHERED FOR CEREMONY AT WEIGHING-IN TIME IN AFTERNOON . . . ALABAMA KID AND JOE RUGGUZZONI DREW WINDUP BERTH OUT OF HAT

HOSTER HERO AT ARENA

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

No, hits, no runs, no errors.

That, in short, is the box score of last night's boxing carnival at the Arena, on the North Side. Time of game—entirely too long, or until 11:30 by the clock.

Four 10-round bouts were offered and the hero of the show was white-haired Jackie Hoster, of Columbus, O., the only one of the eight fighters who had sense enough to quit and go home early. He folded up on the ropes in the seventh round of the semi-final against Eddie Zivic, local lightweight, and the referee made it unanimous by calling a halt then and there.

Some of the fans took the hint and started to walk out on the main bout at the halfway mark. They probably had to get up early to go to work.

BAXTER BREAKS HAND

It's been a long time since such a set of tiresome mauling battles has been offered on the same bill here. Maybe it was because all of the bouts were too lengthy, but the show as a whole seemed to serve as a successful antidote for insomnia.

Charley Baxter, of McKees Rocks, bested Eddie Koppy, of Detroit, in the opener, although he broke his right hand in the second round and didn't reveal it until the finish. He might have won by a knockout but for his bad luck and the fact that the referee allowed Koppy to get away with a lot of holding when he should have broken up the prolonged clinches.

RANDALL BEATS HOLT

Billy Holt and Tiger Joe Randall, local Negro welterweights, followed, and Randall was a handy winner, having Billy in bad shape several times and outboxing him all of the way. Joe grew a little careless in the final round and took some punches which didn't do him any good, but he had too big a lead to lose it. At that, the judges disagreed, and the referee's verdict was necessary to decide the issue.

Hoster proved just a wild swinger against Zivic, who himself had an off night and couldn't do anything right. Jackie finally tired and went into seclusion on the ropes in the seventh and was making no effort to fight back when the referee intervened.

In the main bout, Joe Rugguzzoni, Detroit middleweight, did all of the fighting against the Alabama Kid, Dover (O.) Negro, but the judges gave the decision to the Kid. It was a return bout. In their first meeting, the crowd jeered a decision which the Alabama Kid really deserved. Last night, he should have been tossed out for tincanning. Referee Red Robinson properly voted for good old earnest Ruggy, who gives the fans a college try every time out.

The only unusual moment in this battle occurred in the seventh round, when Rugguzzoni was accidentally struck low and resumed fighting after a five minutes' rest.

BASEBALL COMEDY

—By NICK ALTROCK—

WASHINGTON, June 2.—It may be inflation or something, but the big leagues are sure getting a wave of synthetic doubleheaders nowadays. A couple of club magnates get together, and one says:

"You know that game we got scheduled for the first Tuesday after the first Monday in September?"

The other says:

"What about it?"

The first says:

"Well, I looked up that date in the Old Farmer's Almanac, and it says 'rain.' So we better play it as a doubleheader next Sunday and cross the weather man."

The other says:

"O. K. And you know the one scheduled at my park for Friday, August 18. Well, we could play it as a doubleheader on Saturday, June 17, and save two months' interest on the game."

The idea is to put on bargain bills for Saturdays and Sundays for the benefit of the customers. The Cards and Browns have been doing it so regular that St. Louis is off the seven-day-week standard and they've made Monday a vacuum.

Between Rounds

As announced exclusively in the final edition of yesterday's Sun-Telegraph, Johnny Risko is not going to fight Steve Hamas in the main bout at the North Braddock Bowl next Wednesday night, and, unless the club comes through with a substitute match today, it will lose its right under the Boxing Commission's five-day rule.

Everything is set for the Tommy Paul-Jackie Wilson show at Hickey Park Monday night, with Tony Marino and Frankie Jarr in the 10-round semi-final, and for the Vince Dundee-Frankie Goosby show at the Arena next Thursday.

Jack London says Seaman Watson's cancelation of his bout with Mose Butch in Columbus next Monday night was a cold runout.

The Petey Sarron-Pete De Grasse postponed match is back in at the Arena for June 22. Sarron last night defeated Johnny Datto in 10 rounds at Birmingham, Ala.

The fights at the Arena last night drew one of the smallest gates of the season, less than $700 net, and the bouts were in keeping with the purses the boxers received.

SCHMELING CHANGES RING STYLE

TEUTON WORKS ON DEFENSE FOR BAER

LAKE SWANNANOA, N. J., June 2.—(AP.)—A great change has come over the fighting style of Max Schmeling, the youthful German, whose tenure as heavyweight champion was the shortest in modern ring history.

The ring worms who look for a crouching, weaving model of the Jack Dempsey he resembles only in facial mould, seem certain to be shocked at the new Schmeling posture when the calm young Teuton tackles Max Baer in the Yankee Stadium next Thursday night.

Acting on word from the training camp of the reckless young Californian in Atlantic City that Baer plans a rushing, punching headlong fight on the advice of no less than Dempsey himself, Schmeling has adopted a more erect stance, is stressing defense and until the night of the fight at least, has abandoned his old crouching, forcing tactics.

BAER IMPRESSIVE

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 2.—(AP.)—So much has Max Baer impressed competent boxing critics in recent workouts that the big Californian may step into the ring against Max Schmeling at the Yankee Stadium next Thursday night at close to even money in the betting.

Several Californian experts who had not seen Baer in action for more than a year dropped into town yesterday and expressed amazement over the tremendous improvement he showed both on offense and defense.

GRAPHIC GOLF

GIVING THE LEFT ARM A CLEAR PATH

In the above illustrations of Macdonald Smith many points are noticeable that the average golfer fails to carry out in his own swing. For instance, the left wrist remains cocked until the clubhead nears the ball, a distinct source of power.

Another important item is the manner in which the left hip moves to the side in the downswing so that the left arm has a clear path as it pulls the clubhead on through the ball. There is no danger of thus crowding the elbow in toward the side of the body and causing it to collapse at impact.

One of the reasons for this is that Smith's left toe is pointed slightly outward in the stance, a condition that favors a free pivot on the downswing. With the left foot pointed at right angles to the line of flight it is possible that it will block the left hip so that it will not be able to turn around out of the path of the arms and thus prevent the left from going on through.

LOCAL GOLFERS SET FOR OPEN

By TOM BIRKS

The tri-state district standard bearers in the National Open golf championship, scheduled for the North Shore Golf Club, Chicago, next Thursday, Friday and Saturday, will leave Pittsburgh over the week-end, the seven professionals and the lone amateur, Knox Young, intending to practice on the scene of action Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Sam Parks, Jr., professional at the Summit Hotel Club, led the local delegation out of town. Parks is in St. Paul, competing in the St. Paul Open, a 72-hole medal play affair, today and tomorrow.

Pete O'Hara will depart tomorrow night accompanied by Mrs. O'Hara. Sunday night finds Vincent Eldred, of Highland, and Charley Manning, of Shannopin getting away.

Young, the Highland amateur star, is the only representative from this section driving to the scene of action. Emil Loeffler and Perry Del Vecchio are going by train.

This is the earliest that tri-state professionals have been on the scene of action for the Open.

The Taylor Allerdice and Peabody golf teams clash this afternoon at Fox Chapel for the right to meet Turtle Creek for consolation honors in the Interscholastic Golf Conference. The winner also will take down the city scholastic title.

Yesterday, Peabody defeated Allerdice, 13½ to 4½, to remain in the running.

Mrs. George Stengel won the weekly tournament for women at Alcoma yesterday when she scored 115-21—94.

At Ottawa—Wladek Zbyszko, 230, won in straight falls over Vanka Zelesniak, 232, 10:03 and 4:30.

At New Orleans—Jim Londos, 201, won in straight falls over Paul Jones, 200.

Homestead Grays Beat Crawfords

The Homestead Grays pulled up on even terms with the Pittsburgh Crawfords in their current series as they captured the fourth game of the string, 8 to 7, at Greenlee Field last night. The Grays won out in the tenth inning.

In the City League, Homewood downed the Gillespies, 7 to 2; the Cochrans bowed to Whitaker, 6 to 2, and the Books downed the J. L. Thomas nine, 9 to 6.

UANSA SIGNED BY HOMEWOOD

A trio of interesting battles are scheduled for City League consumption this evening, all loop members save the Cochrans, who last night took one on the chin from Whitaker, being slated for action.

At Dormont, the Whitaker entry again will oppose the league leaders. Homewood will be at home to the Books and the J. L. Thomas nine and Gillespies will go to it at Dean Field.

Homewood will show a revamped lineup this evening. Bill Dalzell has signed Studnicki, the former Schenley High School star moundsman, and it is possible that the fast ball pitcher will get the slab assignment against the Books. Toby Uansa will be in the outfield, his bat adding quite a punch.

CAMEL'S costlier tobaccos taste better

GOB TO DROP HIS PILOT

NEW YORK, June 2.—(INS.)—Jack Sharkey, heavyweight champion of the world, and his manager, Johnny Buckley, have definitely come to the parting of the ways.

International News Service learns authoritatively that Sharkey has privately announced he will cast Buckley adrift and manage himself after his fight with Primo Carnera, June 29.

Sharkey, who has a lot of money tied up in mortgages, could use some ready cash, it is said, and is peeved because, while he is the heavyweight champion of the world, his income has been comparatively small during the last three years.

He grossed around $50,000 for a fight with Mickey Walker, $30,000 for fighting Primo Carnera, and took down only about $40,000 for the bout in which he won the title from Schmeling. Figure out one-third of these purses for his manager, plus his huge overhead for trainers, sparring partners, etc., and it is doubtful if he can show much more than $50,000 for his own end in three years as the outstanding heavyweight boxer.

So far, Sharkey hasn't made a nickel out of the championship, and the way gates are going now he won't wax so very fat on his return bout with Carnera. By dropping Buckley, with whom he has been at odds for some time, he can save the one-third manager's cut.

NEW NET LOOP EXPANDED

The newly-formed Allegheny-Kiski Valley Tennis League inaugurates action a week from tomorrow as an eight-club circuit, instead of as the six-team loop that tentatively was announced by Executive Secretary Art Darbaker several days ago. Apollo and Ford City, in doubt as to their court facilities when formation of the A-K group was originally proclaimed, have smoothed out all difficulties and will join Cheswick, Freeport, Leechburg, New Kensington, Tarentum and Vandergrift in the battling.

Addition of the two late comers and decision to play twice around the wheel on a home-and-home basis protracts the campaign aplenty, competition being billed each Saturday from June 10 to September 9, inclusive. The schedule follows:

June 10—Freeport at Vandergrift, New Kensington at Leechburg, Apollo at Tarentum, Ford City at Cheswick.
June 17—Freeport at Leechburg, Apollo at New Kensington, Tarentum at Cheswick, Ford City at Vandergrift.
June 24—Apollo at Freeport, Ford City at New Kensington, Leechburg at Cheswick, Vandergrift at Tarentum.
July 1—Vandergrift at Cheswick, Ford City at Tarentum, Apollo at Leechburg, New Kensington at Freeport.
July 8—Vandergrift at New Kensington, Leechburg at Ford City, Apollo at Cheswick, Tarentum at Freeport.
July 15—Tarentum at Leechburg, Freeport at Ford City, Cheswick at New Kensington, Apollo at Vandergrift.
July 22—Leechburg at Vandergrift, Apollo at Ford City, Cheswick at Freeport, New Kensington at Tarentum.
July 29—Vandergrift at Freeport, Leechburg at New Kensington, Tarentum at Apollo, Cheswick at Ford City.
August 5—Leechburg at Freeport, New Kensington at Apollo, Cheswick at Tarentum, Vandergrift at Ford City.
August 12—Freeport at Apollo, New Kensington at Ford City, Cheswick at Leechburg, Tarentum at Vandergrift.
August 19—Cheswick at Vandergrift, Tarentum at Ford City, Leechburg at Apollo, Freeport at New Kensington.
August 26—New Kensington at Vandergrift, Ford City at Leechburg, Cheswick at Apollo, Freeport at Tarentum.
September 2—Leechburg at Tarentum, Ford City at Freeport, New Kensington at Cheswick, Vandergrift at Apollo.
September 9—Vandergrift at Leechburg, Ford City at Apollo, Freeport at Cheswick, Tarentum at New Kensington.

Meanwhile, in the Pittsburgh Tennis Association Inter-Club League, Capt. J. M. Dixon's youthful Rockwood Reserves have completed their postponed affair with the Bureau of Mines aggregation by edging out 5-4 triumph and thereby landing second position in Section II. The summary:

Singles—DeJohn, Rockwood, defeated Schrenk, Bureau, 6-5, 7-5; 6-4; Rosenthal, Bureau, defeated Wick, Rockwood, 6-4, 6-1; McColligan, Rockwood, defeated Davis, Bureau, 6-3, 4-6, 6-1; D. Hatch, Rockwood, defeated Rick, Bureau, 6-0, 6-0; Ponie, Bureau, defeated Fay, Rockwood, 6-4, 8-6; Snively, Rockwood, defeated Helper, Bureau, 6-1, 7-5.

Doubles—Davis and Rosenthal, Bureau, defeated Fay and Daucherty, Rockwood, 6-1, 6-4; Ponie and Schrenk, Bureau, defeated DeJohn and Wick, Rockwood, 6-4, 6-0; Hatch and McColligan, Rockwood, defeated Helper and Rick, Bureau, 6-2, 6-3.

Capt. George Henderson, of Stanton Heights, has accepted the chairmanship of the P. T. A. doubles field day on the Stadium lot, Sunday, June 11. All tennis devotees of the district are invited to attend the gathering. Teams will be chosen by lot according to fashion set at the recent get-together indoors on the Pittsburgh Golf Club covered rectangles and abbreviated tussles will be in order up to the semi-finals.

25-1 Shot Wins Oaks at Epsom

EPSOM DOWNS, June 2.—(AP.)—E. T. Thornton-Smith's Chatelaine today won the one hundred fifty-first renewal of the Oaks stakes, English classic for three-year-old fillies.

Miss J. B. Courtaulds' Solfatara was second and Fur Tor, owned by the retired American business man, W. M. G. Singer, was third.

Chatelaine, by the great sire Phalaris out of Herself, finished the one and a half miles a length and a half in front of Solfatara with Fur Tor two lengths further back.

Brown Betty, owned by the American sportsman, William Woodward, and the favorite, was unplaced as was Clorette Glorney's Katherine Roet, which also was well fancied.

Chatelaine won at the long odds of 25 to 1. Solfatara was 20 to 1 to win and Fur Tor 100 to 8.

The stakes were £2,000 with extras.

King George and Queen Mary watched the race from the royal box.

Pennsylvania's need of minimum wage, old age pension and child labor laws should be kept before the public in an effort to impress upon the Governor the necessity for a special legislative session to "deal broadly" with them, according to the executive committee of the Joint Committee on the Social Crisis.

AUDACIOUS GIRL REVEALS SECRETS OF SOUTHERN SEAS

CHAPTER XV.

An old model truck drove us almost half a mile to the plantation house. It was a big bungalow, bare but comfortable and cool. I looked with much interest at my two hosts. The older man had an unpleasant reputation for cruelty to natives; in fact, he had once been severely fined. All of which didn't make him feel more fraternally disposed to the few hundred savages under his control. Whatever he was to natives, he was a pleasant host. The younger man I also knew as one of the most popular men in the islands. Here again I saw a man perfectly in tune with his surroundings. His was largely the clerical end of managing the vast plantation, and also he was a liklik doctor, that is, a sort of doctor. His name was Ian, and I liked his pleasant, keen eyes, his cheerful authority, and his manner of making us feel at home.

Moreover, I was myself in need of professional services. As if the anguish of an itching nose throughout the night wasn't enough, I had waked up with one of my little fingers beginning to swell. Unfortunately I wore a ring on that finger, and had neglected to remove it until the possibility of doing so was past. The finger had swollen until the ring cut deep into the flesh. My arm throbbed like a toothache by the time I reached the bungalow.

Without delay Ian went to work on it, comfortably mixing sympathy with skill, and for half an hour he kept my hand soaking in near-boiling water and boric solution, until gradually the pain ceased and the swelling somewhat subsided. But it was two days before I could get the ring off.

In the meantime, Watson and Axel and the senior overseer gathered around the veranda table with us, and we gave what news there was of the New Guinea world, which is Rabaul, plus what little news we knew ourselves of the world at large. You see, in the Pacific Islands a radio set is virtually useless. Marx, in Rabaul, tried an agency for radio, but the best results were unintelligible. So the isolated plantations do not yet know the blessing of a receiving set.

LUNCHEON SERVED

It was a lovely, languorous day at Kalini, one of those days that leave a sunsplash on your memory. A very gay and elaborate luncheon was served up, with Ian presiding, eager that every one should be filled to the brim. There was a newly-slain pig, taro, the unfailing first course of hot soup, bananas, cocoanut leavened bread, five-corners, which is a kind of fruit, lime juice and water, and beer. The house-boy had planted a large bouquet in the center of the table, and decorated the cloth with blossoms; a punkah swayed gently overhead. Skipper Watson, cleaned up and shaved and content after a warm shower-bath, puffed at his pipe and looked little like the morose man at Ah Chee's. Only Axel was a trifle restless; it occurred to me that he was worried about his mary, and doubtless not without cause.

The drinking water, when it was served, was cold and sweet—almost as if it had been chilled. I remarked upon this, and Ian said it came from the river behind the plantation, offering to show me it later if I felt inclined.

A siesta for every one after the meal was indicated. Each of us dragged a chair or wicker couch to some breezeswept corner.

JUNGLE COUNTRY

Later Ian and I started out for the jungle, to find the turbulent river that gave such delicious water. We broke our way through barbed vines, forced apart the cables of trailing lianas. Mighty trees towered above us, their reaching limbs trailing parasite vines and ropes; antler ferns filled the tree-crotches. We slipped on the wet ground dozens of times, and were up again, muddy and unhurt. Screaming parrots and cockies flew outraged over our heads, scolding at the intrusion upon their sanctuary. The sun just barely penetrated through the cool peace of the jungle. Finally I could hear the river, where it tumbled, daft with freedom. And quite suddenly we were above it.

We were somewhat above the pebbly bank. There were rapids, but the water was not deep. A native in a brilliant laplap was spear-fishing, but as we crawled down to the river's edge, and exchanged the greeting "Ikh," he disappeared into uninvaded parts. Kanakas seem to be suddenly absorbed into the ether, they disappear so quickly.

On a great stone jutting out into the rapids Ian and I sat for a long time in the midst of the serene jungle, by the happy river. And how he did talk! He had not had company to talk to for months, and heaven only knows when he had last spoken to a girl. Moreover, he loved his jungle country, even loved its great loneliness. I was alive to its beauty myself, but I saw it even more clearly through his eyes. There are no words to convey the great peace of the jungle. You either love it or hate it, passionately. The throb of the eternal kundus broke the running stillness—only that and the swift sound of the rapids. No breeze moved the foliage; all (except ourselves) that spoke of life were the tiny, gray, darting fish in the still pool behind our rock.

Ian told me about the girl he was engaged to "down south," and how she did not want to live in the islands.

VISIT ENDS

We left Kalili in the sunset. Our crew, back from a day's limilimbo (idling), save for the loading of a few bags of copra, were happy and irrepressible. Each had plaited himself a thick wreath of vines for his head. Garlands hung around their necks, and their well-shaped, lithe hips were girdled with vines. Like young pagan demigods they looked, their slender, half-naked brown bodies in high relief against a coral sky.

We moved slowly out of the lagoon, among tiny coral islands, scattering royal-blue and jade fish in our path, and entered the unrippled madder sea. And two lonely white men, loath to let us go, waved goodbye from the plank wharf. Kanakas shouted gleeful antiphonies of farewell back and forth, the sound echoing in the strange manner of voices over placid water. All this tinted beauty of vast sea and sky we had to ourselves—we handful of human beings—all this benediction of sinking sun and sudden dusk. I leaned my head back to feel the rose light on my eyelids, and said to Bill Watson, "I love it!" And he puffed at his pipe and said, "It's a good life."

And so, drenched in glory, we headed up the New Ireland coast, toward Kaewieng—Skipper Watson and the girl who had been a commuter on the five-fifty-five.

ANOTHER LANDING

Kaewieng ripples her white beaches in a jade-green sea. We approached it on a bright Sunday morning, through a swarm of little palm-topped coral islands. Schools of dolphins played around our bow, leaping with superb grace, the sun striking rainbows on their dripping bodies. The sea there is reef-infested, the white coral below the surface coloring the water from nile-green and cream, where the breakers foam on reefs, to the unbelievable jade of deep water. There is no blue water about Kaewieng. In the atoll-bound harbor little schooners lie very still, their sails incredibly white against the green.

I had no notion as to where I should stay in Kaewieng. I had the letter of introduction to a trader and his wife there, but I didn't want to use it. Independently inclined, I had still to learn of the willing hospitality that belongs to far places.

Bill Watson, after negotiating the business of tying-up at the bridge, seemed to take my shelterless plight to heart. He said I couldn't stay in the Chinese hotel. Nevertheless, I wanted to investigate it. I had a warm spot in my heart for Chinese hotels, after Ah Chee's. So together we followed the dusty road, sheltered by magnificent German-planted trees, along the white beach, past the native hospital and calaboose, and up the hill, past a dozen comfortable bungalows, and turned suddenly to the left into Kaewieng's Chinatown.

It is a tiny, effete Chinatown, with little of the noisy fascination of Rabaul's. Unpainted, ramshackle wooden houses lean forward, their doorways sheltered by protruding roofs slanting crazily on unsteady props. Each doorway is a shop, full of cheap knives, laplap cloth, boys' powder (the brilliant coloring that the natives use to streak their faces and dye their hair), shell money strung on fiber cord, cheap watches and trumpery, feather fans, flamboyant kimonos from Hongkong, tinned bully-beef and salmon, the hundred and one things that traders purvey. The shops themselves are dark and unwholesome, marking the decadence of the once splendid settlement. But the shopkeepers smiled at us pleasantly. A Chinaman in the tropics always looks freshly starched. They shame the average white man, who goes about looking devil-may-care and uncomfortably hot.

THE STORAGE CELL (ACCUMULATOR)

The generally-used type (Plante) of storage cell consists of lead plates immersed in sulphuric acid solution in an insulating container (rubber or glass).

When direct current is led through the cell (charging), the plates connected with the positive wire oxidize and become lead peroxide (Pb02); the plates connected with the negative wire remain lead but become spongy, and the sulphuric acid solution becomes more concentrated (specific gravity increases with charge). By discharging the cell the chemical reaction is reversed and the energy liberated manifests itself in electromotive force (2 volts approximately per cell), furnishing current in an outside circuit. Above: Intermeshing plates of a cell (connected in parallel). Right: Plates assembled with insulators between them to prevent short circuit. The plates shown are made by pasting lead oxide (PbO) to a lead-antimony frame (Faure type). When charging, the positive plates are changed to Pb02 and the negative to Pb, respectively. By connecting several cells in series, storage batteries of higher voltage are obtained. (Rowland: Applied Electricity).

VARIATIONS OF LUMINOUS INTENSITY

WOODROW WILSON (1856-1924)

America's war President, who together with Congress had been forced into the World War (1917) to uphold the freedom of the seas, to defend the rights of small nations—in other words to "make the world safe for democracy." He outlined a program for a just and lasting settlement, known as the "14 points" (freedom of the seas, abolition of secret treaties, removal of economic barriers between nations, reduction of armaments, etc.) (World's History).

KING ALBERT OF BELGIUM

The fighting king of "The Cockpit of Europe," Belgium, the country invaded by the Germans in 1914. After the war King Albert was again restored to power, the damages paid by Germany. (World's History).

GEN. PERSHING

Gen. Pershing commanded an army of about 2,000,000 American soldiers in the World War. It was this great reinforcement of the Allied Armies that finally led to the victorious conclusion of the war. (World's History).

HORIZONTAL, VERTICAL AND NORMAL ILLUMINATION

The intensity of illumination can be increased by a reflector in the desired direction, which is vertical to the plane of illumination. (Croft: Electric Illumination). (Science).

MANUFACTURE OF PAINT (Chemistry)

Besides "body" (pigments) and "vehicle" (oil), driers and volatile thinners are ingredients of paint. The driers are made by boiling some oils with oxides of manganese, lead or cobalt. They assist catalytically in the oxidation (drying). The thinners make the paint spread in thin film. They consist of turpentine (distillate of pine resin) or benzole (distillate of coal tar) or petroleum distillates. Left: Filling cans with paint from hopper on automatic scale. Right: Elimination of coarse particles by a clarifying separator during the manufacture of enamels.

VIEW OF THE BRAIN FROM LEFT (Science)

The cerebrum is a spherical mass of convoluted surface divided by a deep fissure into the right and left hemispheres, which are connected by a mass of nerve fibers (corpus callosum). The outside layer is the cortex of gray nerve tissue, the seat of higher mental processes. The main convolutions and fissures are shown. The left hemisphere controls the right side of the body, the right hemisphere the left side. The cerebellum, under the cerebrum in the rear, consists of two hemispheres connected by a bridge. It is the seat of timing, succession and co-ordination of movements. At the base of the cerebrum lies the interbrain, containing reflex centers for responses involving feelings and adjoining it is the mid brain, connected with the eye, ear and skin by fibers. The pons (a bridge of fibers between the cerebral cortex and cerebellum) is the seat of acts of skill (writing, working, etc.). The medulla, at the top of the spinal chord, controls many vital functions (respiration, heartbeat, contraction of blood-vessels, etc.). (Caldwell, Skinner, Tietz, Biological Foundations of Education).

About time for Literary Digest to take a straw vote on something.

Why not hay fever? And allow the voters to bury their faces in the accumulated ballots?

It's June and the pollen is dandruffing its light and airy way through the air. Every western breeze brings its load of nasal gymnastics. Each southern zephyr packs its proboscis punch. Whispering eddies from the Canadian wheat fields start a community chorus of Manhattan weeping madness. It's only the ocean winds that give us any relief and that is as temporary as beer on ice.

A trip on a mountain ain't bad for the snifflepppums. But you can't stay on a mountain all the time. You've got to come down to get your hair cut and your shoes half-soled and heeled.

Doctors can't figure just what causes the rare June snorters. All they know is that your eyes start running from a standing start and your nose rears back like a frightened mule. The sneezing ailment can be cured by keeping your head under water and learning to breathe through your ears.

There is a surcease of explosive sorrow down by the seashore. Everybody knows it and we all scamper in the direction of the clam shells. Last summer we lived in a hotel along with 500 other sufferers.

That was some vacation. There was one bird on the floor above who seemed to be trying to sneeze himself into a commercial hour. He certainly was worth a sustaining program on any national hookup.

We had been sneezing from midnight to dawn when a man poked his head in the door and said, "Have you got an agent? You should go great in Radio City now that they are using the mikes in the footlights. They will be able to hear you in every seat in the house."

We gave four auditions for Roxy and Johnny Royal. But didn't land a star job. They had heard better sneezers. None louder. But with more rhythm and operatic experience.

However, we did land in the chorus.

Herron's Fine Words

The Mayor Leaves Nothing but Deeds to Be Desired In the Warfare Against Racketeers.

If Mayor John S. Herron were not in alliance with Senator James J. Coyne; if, as president of Council, he had not been one of Mayor Charles H. Kline's chief lieutenants, the city would be thrilled by his fine words to the detective force yesterday.

He told the detectives they would lose their jobs if they failed to proceed against criminal racketeers.

He told them they were not to allow political considerations to influence them.

He told them ward leaders would not be permitted to say who should or should not be arrested.

This is a complete reversal of the policy that Herron supported when he was president of Council, and the detectives cannot be blamed if they are bewildered.

After having been taught for years that politics took precedence over everything else, and that ward leaders had the authority to dictate whether or not racketeering should be tolerated, it is not surprising that they should have been slow to act as Mayor Herron now declares he wants them to act.

If the Mayor's fine words are followed by fine deeds, the people will be quick to applaud him.

In the meanwhile they will not forget that he is a candidate for a full term as Mayor, and faces the prospect of formidable opposition because of the people's dislike of the policy he approved as president of Council.

Half a Loaf

The Retention of the Fee System in the Delinquent Tax Collector's Office Is Inexcusable.

On the theory that half a loaf is better than no bread, Gov. Gifford Pinchot has approved Senator James J. Coyne's bill reducing the County Delinquent Tax Collector's fee from 10 to 5 per cent.

The Governor reflects the sentiment of a multitude of citizens of the county when he declares the office of delinquent tax collector should be abolished, and the people saved the huge sums that they contribute to the collector's private and personal bank account.

The work done by the collector could be done just as well by the County Treasurer. The remuneration for the collection of delinquent taxes should be in the form of a fixed salary.

Gov. Pinchot points out that the net commissions of the collector during the four years 1928 to 1932 exceeded the salary of the President of the United States for four years.

The collector's fees at 5 per cent will continue high. As people regain prosperity and pay off the taxes that have fallen into arrearage during the depression the collector will have a princely income.

There is little doubt that Senator Coyne could have abolished this evil by merely saying the word.

Flowers for Shut-Ins

The Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association Is Going To Make June 10 a Memorable Day.

The florists of America, with noble purpose embued, have set for themselves a mighty, soul-pleasing, heart-cheering goal—to send gratis flowers to every shut-in in the land.

What a joyous mission! Has it not been said, "Flowers are God's thoughts of beauty to gladden mortal gaze!"

And if a shut-in doesn't need gladdening, who does?

What could be more appropriate than an attempt to transform the quarters of the aged, the ailing, the crippled and the infirm into fragrant bowers of beauty, to bring a breath of the outdoors, the perfume of the spring blooms, the brightness of the fields and gardens into the drab monotony of the shut-in's life!

June 10 has been set as the date by the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association, and every florist will be prepared to carry out this splendid mission.

You, dear reader, have your part to perform. Florists are not mind readers. You, today, resolve to further this cause. List the shut-ins round about you and make certain that none are forgotten. Mark a circle on the calendar—June 10—and notify your florist to remember the shut-ins on your list.

This is not a commercial venture. It is entirely altruistic. Early June finds the florists with an abundance of flowers and they want to put this surplus to the best possible use, and the best possible use is the bedside of those who cannot get out of doors to enjoy nature.

The florists believe, with Hannah Moore, that "the world does not require so much to be informed as reminded," and this newspaper entertains that same belief.

Flowers, then, for every shut-in on June 10!

'Better Times' Parade

The Businessmen's Demonstration Tonight Celebrates The Return of Industrial Activity.

More than a hundred Pittsburgh merchants are sponsoring a "Better Times Parade and Pageant," to be held tonight. Thousands of marchers, many in costume, with a number of bands of music, will proceed through the downtown section and to the North Side. The spectacle will be worth seeing.

For nearly four years we have been trying to bolster our courage and inspire cheerfulness by telling ourselves the depression was over. We deceived ourselves, but we are not deceiving ourselves now.

Multitudes of Pittsburghers have concrete evidence that good times are returning. They have it in the resumption of activity in mills that have been idle, in the hiring of men, in increases in wages.

The celebration tonight will be honest and whole-hearted.

SUN-TELEGRAPH'S PLATFORM

For Pittsburgh and Western Pennsylvania

6—Voting machines to insure honest elections.
7—Development of river transportation.
8—Development of air transportation.
9—Electrification of railroads.
10—Fair public utility rates.

Don't Get All Wrapped Up in Them! -:- By Nelson Harding

Be careful, Sam, or you'll be bound
By paper going round and round,
In never ending rolls and reels,
Until you're tied from head to heels.

And like an ancient mummy rolled,
And tightly wrapped in fold on fold;
Come, Uncle Sam, your common sense,
Should keep you from entanglements.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

'Confessing'—as a Pastime

It has been said that we Americans are too fond of washing our linen in public. And we can't deny it.

* * *

We are so anxious to prove that we are mid-Victorian that we sometimes smear a lot of extra black spots on the linen—and then a publicity man to hang it where nobody will MISS it!

* * *

Even when we shoot a husband or get mixed up in a nightclub scandal we don't feel that it has been a success until we have "told all" in a newspaper serial giving the story of our lives.

Divorce is no longer a crime. But then, neither is plucking your eyebrows or polishing your nails or arguing with your mother-in-law or spanking Junior. Yet most of us have the delicacy to do our manicuring and eyebrow artistry in absolute privacy, and to discipline the family, when nobody is looking or listening. But, our divorces, we blazon to the whole world in all their sordid details; and our marital disputes are carried on at the restaurant dinner tables and over the bridge table, just to brighten up other people's evenings.

* * *

If a woman gets a bruised eye, she cautiously hides herself away from the public gaze, until it has disappeared. But we take out our bruised hearts and make them into songs, which are broadcast nightly over the radio.

* * *

When we lose all our money, we try to keep the fact as dark as possible and to dress and act as though nothing had happened. But when we lose a lover or a husband, we rush into court or burst into print and "tell all."

Every woman who has had an especially stormy and variegated marital career, seems obsessed with a passion to write a book about it, as do lots of men, who have made several speed-records from the divorce-court to the altar. Indeed, "CONFESSING" is our great national pastime—and books and magazines devoted to it are some of our best sellers.

* * *

But, there are lots of things in every human life and soul, which are nobody else's business; and which delicacy and dignity would prompt us to keep quiet about, if we were not so fond of "washing our vices in public."

* * *

We may be the brightest, snappiest nation on earth—of course, we are!—but we could learn a lot about the value of a poker-face from the Chinese. It's all right to wash your vices—but why hang them in the parlor?

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, June 2.—Thoughts while strolling: Any time I stand near a puddle a motorist splashes me. But an artist must be receptive to all manifestations of life. Heigh ho! I always mix Donald McDonald and Carl Randall. And Joseph Morschaeur and Henry Morganthau.

H. H. McClure's reserved smile. Whatever became of Master Gabriel? Nobody can look as knifey as Eugene O'Neill. That block-long Browning real estate sign is on the loose again. Beauty parlors killed off the tattle magazines. Harry Acton, a Youngstown (N. Y.) boy, who made good in the city.

The grizzled gentry sunning in the little squares set spinnaker-like in the hubbub. I never pass an awning rod without wanting to chin myself. One of my favorite people—Justine Hall. Simeon Strunsky, who writes the "topics" on Time's editorial page. Bide Dudley in vaudeville.

Milton Aborn, the Gilbert and Sullivan impresario, wears a square-crowned derby, too. George Ade and H. T. Webster are pitching horseshoes daily, down in Florida. Just as wild as a couple of pigeons! Probably puffing cubebbies on the sly. A man looks about furtively before drinking a glass of beer—the nudge of custom.

One-word description of Stanley Walker—crunchy. Nothing so comfortable looking as the way a sleeping cat tucks paws under itself. Snooty speakeasies such as the long-unraided "21" are now getting folksy. And I have a profound hunch, they are on their way out. The world changes again!

* * *

Manhattan's newest, brightest and most amiable man-about-town in Delos Chappell, a Denver blade who made his metropolitan debut last fall as producer of Lillian Gish's "Camille." He frequents the more sedate bright spots with Miss Gish or George Buchanan Fife, the last and most beloved of the Park Row dandies of a glamorous newspapering unhappily dead. Another young recruit from the ranks of the haute noblesse is Tom Hamilton, wealthy and handsome Pittsburgher. A juvenile, he speaks of his first failure as "a grand Thursday night run."

* * *

Richard Watts, film reviewer, takes no one to a movie or theater opening save his mother. He has also never been seen in a dinner jacket, while she is invariably in smart evening frock and fluttering with shoulder orchids. To heighten the contrast young Watts features collars of Prussian blue. He came out of West Virginia's aristocratic old capital Charleston, to New York, and his devotion to his parent is a sharp relief in Broadway's pattern of neglect.

* * *

The Strollers, an organization of amateur players which recently disbanded, was one of best examples of one-man clubs. Robert Cornell Sands, who passed on last year, was its genius and embodiment and when he departed the club's dissolution was immediate. The Coffee House is also a one-man organization, being almost entirely composed of friends and acquaintances of the deservedly celebrated bon-vivant, Frank Crowninshield. And how many notice his resemblance to Count Boni?

* * *

Lillian Gish, by the way, provided a melancholy evening in "No. 9 Pine Street," a study of frozen New England conscience. It was a dramatization of the famous ax murders of the mauve decade—the killings in the Borden family. Miss Gish did fairly well by a poor piece. And made a stage door John of the silk-hatted George Jean Nathan on her opening night.

* * *

There is not—and likely never will be—another private office flowering into the Babylonish magnificence of that occupied by Roxy at Radio City. Two floors high, hung entirely with sweeps of black with silver lighting fixtures and a carpet so thick it suggests snowshoes, it cascades a bewildering splendor for the visitor. The private dining room, gushed in artificial sunshine, will accommodate 25 in a pinch, and is usually filled at luncheon.

* * *

For some time I've been tearing around bellowing about the realism of the train noises in the play "Twentieth Century." At breakfast today, after lathering into another enthusiasm, I was told coldly that it was all done by a gramaphone back stage—a recording of the actual noises of the express thundering into Grand Central. My enthusiasm deflated into a meek "Oh!" Just about the time I recover from one paragraphic blunder I have to go into hiding again. See you Christmas!

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Every day or so, along comes a letter like this.

"You're supposed to be an intelligent person who knows what's going on. Yet, you're always referring to God—telling us there is a God and we should have faith in Him.

"How can you look at what's happening in the world and still talk bunk like that? If there was a God, could poor little children be kidnaped; could there be these dreadful gangster murders—these awful fiend outrages by insane men that are worse than beasts? You can't make me believe in God with things like that going on!"

I'm not trying to make you or anyone else believe in God. If you don't want to believe in God, that's your bad luck, not mine. But if you don't want to believe in Him, I'd advise you to get a Regular Reason—instead of the Muddled Mumblings you're using at present.

If there was a God could little children be kidnaped—could America have a crime wave—could every day be filled with more hideous horrors?

Why not?

Why blame those horrors on God?

God made man; gave him a brain.

That brain is man's proudest possession. Just try and tell him he hasn't free will to use it! Listen while he boasts of all he's done with it!

And what has he done with it?

He has done marvels—when he wished. He has annihilated space and eliminated time. He has made "the desert blossom like the rose." He has conquered hideous plagues—relieved ghastly suffering—banished unspeakable cruelty—made life infinitely freer and finer for billions.

All of these things man has done if and when it served his profit, pleasure and pride to do so.

And he has done these things because he had a brain—a self-starting brain which could reason and decide—a brain to meet ANY obstacle which might arise in the course of human life.

With me so far, God-baiter? All right; stop your pouting and come a little further.

All of these things man has done—and you're proud he's done them. What's more, you'll be the first one to admit that there's no limit to WHAT man can do, once he sets his mind to it.

BUT WHY, SHOULD WE BLAME KIDNAPING AND OTHER OUTRAGES ON GOD?

Either we're men, or mice.

If we're mice, we've a right to squeak when a snake comes along.

BUT IF WE'RE MEN, WE USE THE BRAINS GOD GAVE US TO KILL OUR SNAKES.

And we can kill our snakes.

If we can conquer cannibals, we can control kidnapers.

If we can lick yellow fever, we can prevent fiend outrages.

If we can wallop time, we can wipe out gangsters.

BUT WE CAN'T DO IT WALLOWING IN STUPIDITY AND SENTIMENTALITY AND THEN BLAMING OUR ROTTEN CONSEQUENCES ON GOD.

Why beef at God for fiend outrages—yet fight every protective eugenic law which would prevent the mating of half-wits and the inevitable breeding of beasts?

Why rave at gangsters—yet allow generation after generation to fester and rot in the gutters of our slums?

GOD IS NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR THESE THINGS.

WE, OURSELVES, ARE RESPONSIBLE. YOU AND I—EVERY ONE OF US WHO HAS A VOTE—ARE RESPONSIBLE FOR EACH KIDNAPED BABY, EACH OUTRAGED LITTLE GIRL, EACH MURDERED MAN.

Why talk about "God's cruelty to innocent children" when we, who claim to be civilized Americans, torture and stunt those same innocents in the sweatshops of the East, in the mines and mills of the South, in the beet fields of the North, in the orchards of the West?

Blaming God!

The Human Side of the News

Japanese Army's Progress in China—Clamorous Jehol—Flight of a Tartar Tribe—Last of the Great Emperors

By EDWIN C. HILL

THE wicked chatter of machine guns echoes along the Great Wall of China. There remains no longer any doubt that Japan, ignoring all protests from the Western World, is determined to carve out a great empire on the Asiatic mainland, combining Manchuria and the old Chinese province of Jehol, with young Henry Pu-Yi, last of the Manchu blood, peering through horn-rimmed glasses from the Dragon Throne. Golden, glamorous Jehol, of the greatest of Chinese emperors, Ch'ieng Lung, and of the lovely Turkistan princess who broke his heart, falls to pieces while the League of Nations murmurs in its sleep.

There was a day when Jehol's riches, its pomp, its superb buildings struck awe into the hearts of the wild tribes of Mongolia and their savage khans. And today, if you visit the marvelous Century of Progress Exposition at Chicago, you may see in replica the greatest glory of Jehol and of ancient China, the Potala, the Golden Pavilion, the perfect pearl of architecture which the great Ch'ieng Lung erected to commemorate the most tragic migration in the history of mankind, the flight from Russia in 1771 of the Torguts, or Tartars—a flight from the tyranny of the Muscovites—which carried a whole nation, men, women and children, across the width of Asia. It was a flight more terrible than Napoleon's retreat from Moscow.

* * *

DE QUINCY, magnificent intellect fired by opium, tells us the story of that frightful flight. It lasted seven months and covered 2,400 miles of steppes and desert. Daily there were bloody battles with the pursuing Russian armies and the savage tribes that blocked the way.

Four hundred thousand began the flight, with the cry: "Our children shall not be serfs forever! Let us go back to the land where the sun rises!" Three hundred thousand perished along the bloody way.

Never resting, the Tartars struggled onward, ever eastward, with their millions of camels, horses, donkeys, mules and sheep, their baggage wagons, tents, food and weapons. More than two-thirds perished of starvation or died by the sword. Amazing that they held out; that they did not lie down and die and be freed of an existence of which every waking moment was agony! The world has never known a tale like it, and likely will never know another.

* * *

AT LAST from the summit of low hills they glimpsed the sparkling waters of Lake Balkash. Mad with thirst, at the sight of the clear water a dreadful confusion took place. Thousands waded into the water up to their knees. Many drank until they writhed in convulsions and drowned where they fell. While the confusion was at its height, the pursuing Bashkirs and Khirghiz attacked and threw themselves with wild yells into the midst of the thirst-tortured Tartars. Fighting for their lives, Mohammedans and Buddhists sank beneath the reddened water in bloody embrace.

The unholy slaughter would have continued until not a living Tartar remained had not Chinese cavalry come storming down the slopes. From the hilltops Chinese artillery opened fire on the wild tribesmen and broke them in disorder. In the afterglow of the sunset Lake Balkash gleamed redly. In the water and upon the shore lay thousands of corpses.

* * *

BUT next morning, when the signal was given to resume the march the survivors drove forward again, under the protection of Chinese infantry, cavalry and artillery. They came soon to the River Ili and crossed to the other side, to China. The flight of the Tartar tribe had ended.

To glorify this flight the great Emperor Ch'ieng Lung built the Golden Pavilion whose replica, constructed by Sven Hedin, will be seen by millions this summer in the exposition which so marvelously typifies the spirit and courage of the people of Chicago.

Ch'ieng Lung was the last of the great Emperors, the Sons of Heaven. It was after him that China's decline set in, and that the long paralysis of pacifism, which has finally wrecked and humiliated a once great people, seized upon the Sons of Han.

In the Golden Pavilion Ch'ieng Lung welcomed and made love to the lovely Hsiang-Fei, a Turkistan princess captured in battle by his general. "The Perfumed One," she was known, and her picture even today is to be seen upon Chinese paper money, so deathless was the fame of her beauty and her great soul. For Ch'ieng Lung, who ruled Asia and considered even King George of England as his vassal, could not rule the heart of the captive princess.

* * *

THE world never knew such a true tale of hopeless love. The autocrat of Asia, the king of kings, suffered agonies of torment in the presence of this woman of roses and ice, who never permitted him even to touch her. He grew thin and ill, and finally his mother, the empress dowager, commanded the lovely Hsiang-Fei to strangle herself. Gladly she obeyed, and rested in tranquil sleep over the victory she had won. And at Tung-ling, where today the great Manchu emperors are resting in their crumbling tombs, hard by the military camps of the victorious Japanese, a simple monument has stood for 170 years outside the great mausoleum of Ch'ieng Lung. There the summer winds rustle sadly about the grave of Hsiang-Fei.

A NEW CAR

By Winifred Black

Son-in-law thinks he ought to have a new car. And he doesn't see why on earth Mother-in-law doesn't send him the money to buy one.

Didn't he marry Daughter and take her off of Mother-in-law's hands for better, for worse, for richer, for poorer? And isn't his old car worn out? I ask you—just listen to the rattle, and see what you think.

No. Mother-in-law was not pleased when Daughter married Son-in-law. She thought Daughter was too young to marry, and she was afraid Son-in-law was a trifle old for Daughter, and there were other reasons, but, of course, that was none of Mother-in-law's business.

And after the marriage Mother-in-law did buy a home for daughter, and her husband. She wasn't crazy about Son-in-law, but she did want Daughter to have a pleasant place to live.

Very pleasantly they live, and Mother in-law and her friends are all glad whenever they think of Daughter quietly in her own garden, without the bitter struggle of the world outside.

But Son-in-law wants a new car—he thinks he ought to have one.

Why not, Mother-in-law has a good car—why shouldn't he have one too?

Mother-in-law has earned her own car, she worked pretty hard for it, too, but something in Son-in-law's attitude makes her a little apologetic about that car of hers.

To be sure she is not well and she is no longer young and if she didn't have the car she couldn't get out at all.

But still—

She was planning to go down to the seashore this summer and take quite a vacation—

But if she buys the new car for Son-in-law she will have to give up the seashore vacation and if she gives that up she may have to give up the little job of living and working—for all time.

She was just going to write to the seashore place and engage a little beach cottage for the summer—some people were coming to take her house in town while she was gone—and then she heard how badly Son-in-law needed the new car.

I think she had been crying about the beech cottage when I came in or about Son-in-law or about daughter or something.

I advised her to send the letter to the beach people and be done with it.

"You work and work hard, for everything you have. Isn't it about time for the younger generation to turn around and do a little buying for you, or at least for themselves?"

The woman looked at me with a startled expression.

"Why that does sound sort of reasonable," she said.

And she wrote the letter to the seashore. Now if Son-in-law really wants a new car I'm afraid he'll have to buy it for himself.

I wonder if that wasn't common sense?

What do you think?
